This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google’s mission is to organize the world’s information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world’s books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/
English Reprints.

GEORGE VILLIERS.
Second Duke of Buckingham.

THE REHEARSAL.
First acted 7 Dec. 1671. Published [5 July] 1672.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PREVIOUS PLAYS, ETC.

Edited by EDWARD ARBER, F.S.A.,
Fellow of King's College, London; Hon. Member of the Virginia Historical Society; Examiner in English Language and Literature, Victoria University, Manchester; Professor of English Language and Literature, Sir Josiah Mason's College, Birmingham.

BIRMINGHAM:
I MONTAGUE ROAD.
2 November, 1868.
No. 10.
(All rights reserved.)
CONTENTS.

LIFE and TIMES of GEORGE VILLIERS, Duke of Buckingham

(1) Brian Fairfax’s Memorials of him.

(2) Other characters of him, by Lord Peterborough, Bp.

Burnet, Count Grammont, S. Butler, and J. Dryden

INTRODUCTION,

BIBLIOGRAPHY, ‘The Rehearsal’

Keys to ‘The Rehearsal’ 19, 20, 26, 32, 36, 46, 48

THE REHEARSAL

(1) Prologue.

(2) The Actors.

(3) The Text, on odd numbered pages.

(4) The ILLUSTRATIONS, on even numbered pages, principally taken from the following Plays:

Mrs. A. Behn, The Amorous Prince. 1671.

Sir W. D’Avenant, Love and Honour. 1649.

(Poet-laureate) Play House to be let.

Siege of Rhodes, Part I. 1656.

J. Dryden, Conquest of Granada, Parts I. and II. 1672.

(Poet-laureate) The Indian Emperor. 1667

Marriage-à-la-mode. 1691.

Secret Love, or The Maiden Queen. 1668.

Tyrannic Love. 1670 and 1672.

The Wild Gallant. 1669.

Sir R. Fanshawe’s translation (1654) of Don A. H. de Mendoza’s Querer pro falso querer. 1623.

(To love only for love’s sake) 1671.

Col. H. Howard, United Kingdoms.

The Hon. J. Howard, English Monsieur. 1674.

Sir W. Killigrew, Ormasdes, or Love and Friendship. 1668.

Pandora, or The Converts. 1665.

T. Porter, The Villain. 1663.

F. Quarles, The Virgin Widow. 1649.

Epilogue 136
The Life and Times
of
GEORGE VILLIERS,
Second Duke of Buckingham.

Instead of the usual brief Chronicle, we shall on this occasion adduce a series of testimonies that have come down to us from contemporaries, all intimately acquainted with Villiers.

1. In the year 1798, was published in London, a 4to Catalogue of the Curious Collection of Pictures of George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham. The Catalogue is prefaced by the following Advertisement.

We proceed to gratify the curiosity of the public with some other lists of valuable collections; the principal one belonged to that magnificent favourite, George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham; and was only such part of his Museum as was preserved by an old servant of the family, Mr. Trayman, and by him sent to Antwerp to the young duke, to be sold for his subsistence; great part having been embezzled, when the estate was sequestered by the parliament. Some of the pictures, on the assassination of the first duke, had been purchased by the king, the earl of Northumberland, and Abbot Montagu. The collection was kept at York-house in the Strand, and had been bought by the duke at great prices. He gave £10,000 for what had been collected by Sir Peter Paul Rubens; and Sir Henry Wootton, when ambassador at Venice, purchased many other capital ones for his grace. One may judge a little how valuable the entire collection must have been, by this list of what remained, where we find no fewer than nineteen by Titian, seventeen by Tintoret, twenty-one by Bassan, two by Giulio Romano, two by Giorgione, thirteen by Paul Veronese, eight by Palma, three by Guido, thirteen by Rubens, three by Leonardo da Vinci, two by Correggio, and three by Raphael; besides other esteemed and scarce masters.

Mr. Duart of Antwerp bought some of them, but the greater part were purchased by the archduke Leopold, and added to his noble collection in the castle of Prague. He bought the chief picture, the Ecce Homo by Titian, in which were introduced the portraits of the pope, the emperor Charles the Fifth, and Solyman the magnificent. It appears by a note of Mr. Vertue, in the original manuscript, that Thomas earl of Arundel offered the first duke the value of £7,000 in money or land for that single piece. There is a copy of it at Northumberland house.

It may not be improper to mention in this place, that Villiers, when sent with the earl of Holland to the States, to negotiate the restoration of the Palatinate, purchased a curious collection of Arabic manuscripts, collected by Erpinius, a famous linguist; which, according to the duke's designation of them, were after his death, bestowed on the university of Cambridge, of which his grace had been chancellor.

Embedded in this Catalogue, at pp. 24—39, is the following Life of George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, the celebrated Poet. Written by Brian Fairfax Esq, and never before published. This Life is both able and graphic; and apparently authentic. As it will be new to most readers, we give it entire.

Brian Fairfax, Esq. was the second son of Rev. Henry Fairfax, rector of Bolton Percy, and cousin to Thomas, 4th Lord Fairfax (the Parliamentary general), brother to Henry, 5th Lord, and uncle of Thomas 6th Lord Fairfax. [See The Fairfax Correspondence. Ed. by G. W. Johnson, l. cxxv—cxxxv, 1845.] In 1599, he edited Short Memorials of Thomas [4th] Lord Fairfax. Written by himself. The following gives the most favourable account of Villiers; and would seem to show that up to the Restoration, he was apparently no worse than his neighbours.

The original papers from whence this manuscript is faithfully taken, were written by Mr. Brian Fairfax, and in the possession of the late bishop Atterbury.

George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, was the son of that noble favourite.
to two kings; who, in the height of his fortune and flower of his age, engaged his estate and exposed his life, in the service of his king and country.

The name of Villiers is ancient and honourable in France and England. Philip de Villiers L'isle Adam, was the last great master of Rhodes, and defended it six months against the Turkish emperor, Solyman.

The duke's mother was the Lady Katherine Manners, sole daughter and heir of Francis earl of Rutland.

He was born at Wallingford house in Westminster, Jan. 30, 1627.

His elder brother, Charles, died an infant. His sister Mary was duchess of Richmond and Lennox. His brother Francis was born at Chelsea, after his father's death.

The duke inherited from his father the greatest title, and from his mother the greatest estate of any subject in England; and from them both so gracefull a body, as gave a lustre to the ornaments of his mind, and made him the glory of the English court at home and abroad.

The first visit the king made to the duchess after her husband's death, he was pleased to say, He would be a husband to her, a father to her children; and he performed his promise.

The duchess was then great with child, and the king said, He would be godfather; Francis earl of Rutland, the child's grandfather, was the other. They complimented who should give the name. The king named him Francis, and the grandfather gave him his benediction, seven thousand pounds a year.

The duke and his brother, Francis, were bred up by king Charles, * * * Jointly with their children, the same tutors and governors.

They were sent to Trinity College in Cambridge, their names entered in the college-book the same year with prince Charles.

Here the duke became acquainted with two excellent men, Mr. Ab. Cowley, and Mr. Martin Clifford, whom he loved ever after, and they as faithfully and affectionately served him. [To these two a third was added afterwards, who had an equal share with them in his affection, his domestic chaplain; and it was a good argument of his own wit and judgment, and good sense, that he knew how to value a man who had all these good qualities to recommend him.]

From hence they went to the king at Oxford, laying their lives and fortunes at his feet, as a testimony of their loyalty and gratitude, worthy to be imprinted in the memory of the royal family. This they did, not in words and compliments; for they lost their estates, and one of them, soon after, his life.

At Oxford they chose two good tutors to enter them in the war, prince Rupert and my lord Gerard; and went with them into very sharp service: the storming of the close at Litchfield.

At their return to Oxford, the duchess, their mother, was very angry with my lord Gerard, for tempting her sons into such danger; but he told her, it was their own inclination, and the more danger the more honour.

For this the parliament seized on their estates, but by a rare example of their compassion, restored it again in consideration of their nonage; but the young men kept it no longer than till they came to be at age to forfeit it again.

About this time their mother married the marquis of Antrim, and thereby offended the king, and ruined herself.

They were now committed to the care of the earl of Northumberland, and were sent to travel in France and Italy, where they lived in as great state as some of those sovereign princes. Florence and Rome were the places of their residence, and they brought their religion home again, wherein they had been educated under the eye of the most devout and best of kings. The duke did not, as his predecessor, in the title of Lord Ross, had done before him, who changed his religion at Rome, and left his tutor, Mr. Mole, in the inquisition, for having translated king James's book, his admonition to princes, into latin; and Du Plessis Morney's book of the mass into English.

Their return into England was in so critical a time, as if they had now chosen the last opportunity, as they had done the first, of venturing all in the king's service.

In the year 1648 the king was a prisoner in the Isle of Wight, and his friends in several parts of England designing to renew the war; duke Hamilton is GEORGE VILLIERS, Second Duke of Buckingham.

Scotland, the earl of Holland and others in Surry, Going in Kent, many in London and Essex, and these were the last efforts of the dying cause.

The duke and brother, my lord Francis, in the heat of their courage, engaged with the earl of Holland: and were the first that took the field about Rye Gate in Surry.

The parliament, with their old army, knew all these designs, and despised them; till they grew so numerous in Kent, that the general himself was sent to suppress them, who found sharp service in storming of Maidstone, and taking of Colchester.

Some troops of horse were sent, under the command of colonel Gibbons, to suppress them in Surry; and they drove my lord of Holland before them to Kingston, but engaged his party before they got thither, near Nonsuch, and defeated them.

My lord Francis, at the head of his troop having his horse slain under him, got to an oak tree in the high way about two miles from Kingston, where he stood with his back against it, defending himself, scorning to ask quarter, and they barbarously refusing to give it; till, with nine wounds in his beautiful face and body, he was slain. The oak tree is his monument, and has the two first letters of his name F. V. cut in it to this day.

Thus died this noble, valiant, and beautiful youth, in the twentieth year of his age. A few days before his death, when he left London, he ordered his steward, Mr. John May, to bring him in a list of his debts, and he so charged his estate with them, that the parliament, who seized on the estate, paid his debts.

His body was brought from Kingston by water to York house in the Strand, and was there embalmed and deposited in his father's vault in Henry VIIth's chapel, at the abbey of Westminster; with this inscription, which it is a pity should be buried with him:

Depositis
Ilustriorum domini Francisci Villiers
Ingentis specie juvenis
Fili posthumi Georgii
Ducis Buckinghamii

Qui vicesimo octavo anno
Pro rege Carolo
Et patria
Fortiter pugnando
Novem honestis vulneribus acceptis
Obiit vii die Julii
Anno Domino 1648.

The body of the illustrious lord Francis Villiers, a most beautiful youth, the posthumous son of George duke of Buckingham, who, in the 20th year of his age, fighting valiantly for king Charles and his country, having nine honourable wounds, died the 7th of July, 1648.

The duke, after the loss of his brother, hardly escaped with his life to St. Neots, whither also came the earl of Holland, who was there taken, and soon after beheaded.

The duke, the next morning finding the house where he lay surrounded, and a troop of horse drawn up before the gate, had time with his servants to get to horse, and then causing the gate to be opened, he charged the enemy, and killed the officer at the head of them, and made his escape to the sea-side, and to prince Charles who was in the Downs with those ships that had deserted the earl of Warwick.

And now again the parliament gave him forty days time to return to England, but he refused, and chose rather to stay with the prince, who was soon after king Charles the Second, and to follow him in his exile.

The parliament seized on his estate, the greatest of any subject in England, having now his brother's estate fallen to him: the yearly value was above £25,000.

It happened that the manor of Helmesly, which was his brother's, was given to my lord Fairfax, with York-house in the Strand, for part of his arrears, and this fortunately came to him by his marrying my lord Fairfax's daughter.

All that he had to live on beyond sea was the money he got at Antwerp for his pictures, which were part of that costly and curious collection his father got together from Italy, by the help of Sir Henry Wotton and others, which adorned York-house, to the admiration of all men of judgment in pictures: A note of their names and dimensions is all that is now left of them.

The Ecce Homo of Titian was valued at £5000 being the figure of all the great persons in his time. The arch-duke bought it, and it is now in the castle of Prague. These pictures were secured and sent to him by his old guesty servant, Mr. John Traylen, who lived in York-house.

The king resolving to go into Scotland, the duke attended him, and now again the parliament offered him for his estate for £20,000, which was less than a year’s value: but he chose to run the king’s fortune in Scotland, worse than exile, came with him out of Scotland into England; and at Worcester his escape was almost as miraculous as the king’s in the royal oak. He escaped again into France, and went a volunteer into the French army, and was much regarded by all the great officers, signifying his courage at the siege of Arras and Valenciennes.

When he came to the English court, which was but seldom, the king was always glad to see him. He loved his person and his company; but the great men about him desired rather his room than his company.

There now happened a great turn in the course of his life. My lord Fairfax had part of his estate, about £5000 per annum, allotted him by the parliament towards the payment of his arrears due to him as general, and he remitted more than would have purchased a greater estate. They gave him the manor of Helmeley, the seat of the noble family of Rutland in Yorkshire, as a salve for the wound he received there, being shot through the body. They gave him also York-house in London, which was also the duke’s.
The duke heard how kind and generous my lord Fairfax was to the countess of Derby, in paying all the rents of the Isle of Man, which the parliament had also assigned to him for his arrears, into her own hands, and she confessed it was more than all her servants before had done.

The duke had reason to hope my lord had the same inclinations as to this estate of his, which he never accounted his own, and the duke wanted it as much as the countess.

He was not deceived in his hopes, for my lord Fairfax wished only for an opportunity of doing it. He lived in York-house, where every chamber was adorned with the arms of Villiers and Manners, lions and peacocks. He was descended from the same ancestors, earls of Rutland. Sir Guy Fairfax his two sons having married two of the daughters of the earl of Rutland; which my lord took frequent occasion to remember.

The duke resolved to try his fortune, which had hitherto been adverse enough, and he had some revenge on her, by his translation of the ode in Horace—Fortuna invita lata negotiis. Over he came into England, to make love to his only daughter, a most virtuous and amiable lady. He found a friend to propose it, and I think it was Mr. Robert Harlow.

The parents consented, and the young lady could not resist his charms, being the most graceful and beautiful person that any court in Europe ever saw, &c. All his trouble in wooing was, He came, saw, and conquered.

When he came into England he was not sure either of life or liberty. He was an outlaw, and had not made his peace with Cromwell, who would have forbade the banish’d he had known of his coming over. He had a greater share of his estate, had daughters to marry, and would not have liked such a conjunction of Mars and Mercury, as was in this alliance; knowing my lord’s affections to the royal family, which did afterwards produce good effects towards its restoration.

They were married at Nun-Appleton, six miles from York, Sept. 7, 1657, a new and noble house built by my lord Fairfax, and where he kept as noble hospitality. His friend, Ab. Cowley, wrote an epitaphiam, now printed.

When Cromwell heard of it, he rested not till he had him in the tower, and would have brought him to Tower-hill had he lived a fortnight longer.

He had liberty given him to be at York-house with his lady; but going to Cobham to see his sister, he was taken, and sent to the tower.

This so angered my lord Fairfax that he went to Whitehall to the protector, and expostulated the case so as it put him into great passion, turning abruptly from him in the gallery at Whitehall, cocking his hat, and So in the orig.
throwing his cloak under his arm, &c as he used to do when he was angry. Thus I saw him take his last leave of his old acquaintance, Cromwell, whose servants expected he would be sent to bear the duke company up the tower the next morning, but the protector was wiser in his passion.
GEORGE VILLIERS, Second Duke of Buckingham.

I carried the duke the news of the protector's death, and he had then leave to be a prisoner at Windsor castle, where his friend Ab. Cowley was his constant companion. Richard Cromwell soon after abdicated, and then his liberty came of course.

This was the happiest time of all the duke's life, when he went to his father-in-law's house at Appleton, and there lived orderly and decently with his own wife, where he neither wanted, nor so abounded as to be tempted to any sort of extravagance, as he was after when he came to possess his whole estate. He now understood the meaning of that paradox, Dimidium plus totum, with which he used to pose young scholars; and found by experience, that the half or third part of his own estate which he now enjoyed, was more than the whole which he had at the king and his restoration.

Now he lived a most regular life, no courtships but to his own wife, not so much as to his after-beloved and costly mistress, the philosopher's stone.

My lord Fairfax was much pleased with his company, and to see him so conformable to the orders and good government of the family. If they had any plots together, they were to the best purposes, the restoration of the royal family.

My lord Fairfax's maxims in politics was, that the old veteran army which he had commanded, was not to be beaten by any new rais'd force in England; and that the king's friends shewed more affection than discretion in their plots, to restore them while they were united: and that this old army would never be beaten but by itself; as the event shewed, when Lambert and Monk divided them. But the most fatal influence of this opinion in my lord Fairfax was the night before the thirtieth of January, when some of his friends proposed to him to attempt the next day to rescue the king, telling him that twenty thousand men were ready to join with him; he said, he was ready to venture his own life, but not the lives of others against the army now united against them.

The same appeared in the insurrection of sir George Booth, which Lambert, with a brigade of this old army, did so easily suppress; the success whereof inspired him with the ambition of imitating Cromwell, in dissolving the parliament, and making himself protector.

The duke had given sufficient testimony of his loyalty, and my lord Fairfax of his affection and desire to see the royal family restored; and now was the time of doing it.

General Monk in Scotland declared against Lambert, who marched against him with a strong body of horse.

My lord Fairfax, and the duke with him, declared for Monk in Yorkshire; but the duke was obliged to withdraw, because his presence gave a jealousy, that the design was to bring in the king, which was too soon to be owned.

What the event was is well known. I shall only repeat the duke's words in an expostulatory letter to king Charles some years after.

"As to your majesty's return into England, I may justly pretend to some share; since without my lord Fairfax his engaging in Yorkshire, Lambert's army had never quitted him, nor the duke of Albemarle marched out of Scotland."

The king's restoration, volvenda dies en attulit ultro, restored the duke to his estate, but such a train of expense with it, as brought him acquainted with bankers and scriveners, that infested it with the gangreen of usury, which it never recovered.

At the king's coronation no subject appeared in greater splendor. None kept greater hospitality than he did at Wallingford-house, especially for the French nobility that came over. This engaged him in play, which had he continued, his estate had not lasted so long; but he resolved to give it over, and kept his resolution ever after. He was moderate in all his expenses, his table, stable, laboratory. All the king's favours to him were occasions of great expense. His lord lieutenancy in Yorkshire cost him more than it did all that succeeded him. The master of the horses cost him twenty thousand pounds to the duke of Albemarle.

His embassies into France and Holland cost him more than a diamond ring could recompense: that into Holland (setting aside the politick part of it) being a consequence of that into France.
We took barge at Whitehall, June 1673, and lay that night on board the English admiral at the buoy in the Nore, the king and duke being there. The next night we came to anchor in our yacht in the Dutch fleet on the coast of Holland. The next night we were entertained by the states in the Hague. The next night we supped with the prince of Orange at his camp at Bodegraven. Next night with the king of France at Utrecht, where we staid two or three days, and then march'd back with him at the head of his army to Arnheim, where we visited the prince de Conde, who lay ill there of a wound in his arm, which he got passing the Rhine at Tullusa, and Marshal Turin. Thence we went with the king to Nimpguen, Grave, Boxtell, and there we parted. The king went to Paris, and we into the Spanish dominions, to Antwerp, Brussels, Bruges, Ghent, Dunkirk, and Calais; where our yachts stayed for us, and we came to Dover, Canterbury, London; where we arrived the day month that we left it.

He was sent ambassador into France, where he was highly carress'd by the king, and many of the nobility his old acquaintance. This was before the other into Holland. At his return he was chosen chancellor of the university of Cambridge, and entertained them nobly at York-house, where his father had done it on the same occasion forty years before.

He now seemed to be setting up for a favourite, but he wanted his father's diligence, which fitted him to stand before princes.

He fell into a new way of expense in building, in that sort of architecture which Cicero calls, Insana substractiones; and himself, when his friends dissuaded him from it, called it his folly.

The world has been severe in censuring his foibles, but not so just in noting his good qualities.

For his person, he was the glory of the age and any court wherever he came. Of a most graceful and charming mien and behaviour; a strong, tall and active body, all which gave a lustre to the ornaments of his mind; of an admirable wit and excellent judgment; and had all other qualities of a gentleman. He was courteous and affable to all; of a compassionate nature; ready to forgive and forget injuries. What was said of a great man in the court of queen Elizabeth, that he used to vent his discontents at court by writing from company, and writing sonnets, may be said of him: but when he was provoked by the malice of some and ingratitude of others, he might shew that a good natured man might have an ill natured muse.

He gave a good instance of his readiness to forgive injuries. When a considerable man at court did him an injury, which he was fearful he would resent, he desired a friend to mediate for him, and endeavour a reconciliation, which he undertook. The duke told him that he did not remember he had ever injured him, if he had he freely forgave him.

His charitable disposition he seemed to inherit from his grandfather, Francis earl of Rutland, who used every quarter day at London to send his steward with bags of money to several prisons to relieve prisoners and pay their debts, bidding them thank God, and pray for their benefactor, but not telling them who it was.

He was a man of great courage and presence of mind in danger. One instance of it was when a melancholy-mad servant assaulted him with a drawn sword in his hand when he was at supper, and he with a knife disarmed him. The man was afterwards hanged for saying he would do it to the king.

The character which Sir Henry Wolton gives of his father might be said of him, viz.

"Among all the favours which mine eyes have beheld in divers courts and times, I never saw before a strong heart and eminent condition so clearly void of all pride and shocking arrogance either in his face or in his fashion."

It is to be wished the rest of his father's character had been as true of him; his diligence and application to business, and that he had left his few honest servants in as good fortune as reputation, who never wronged him in his estate, nor flattered him in his faults, and thought they escaped well in not being oppressed under the ruins of his fortune.

[When he first began to settle his family he desired his old friends, A[braham] Cowley and M[artin] C[liford] to recom... mend to him a domestick chaplain. They knew how hard it was to please him; he must be a man of learning, wit, good nature, good manners, a graceful person and decent behaviour. They found one [T. Sprat, afterwards Bp. of Rochester. See W. Oldys MS. note to G. Langbaine] to their own mind, and to his; whom he valued as a friend, and loved as a companion; who lived to be an ornament to the church among those of the highest order. He brought the duke acquainted with another excellent person, whose friendship and conversation he much coveted, and wished he could have more of it, who attained afterwards to the highest dignity in the church, and with a lawyer as eminent in his profession: so that his father was not more happy in the choice of a few friends and servants than he was, if he had followed their advice. He saw and approved the best, but did too often deterius sequit.

His father had two crimes objected against him which he was not guilty of; plurality of offices, and preferring his relations. The faults objected against him were, that he loved women, and spent his estate.

His estate was his own. He had often lost it for the king, and might now be allowed to enjoy it himself. If he was fui professus, he never was alieni appetens. If he was extravagant in spending, he was just in paying his debts, and at his death charged his debts on his estate, leaving much more than enough to pay them. If he was a grievance, as he told the house of commons, he was the cheapest to the public that ever was complained of.

He had no children by his dutchess, nor heirs capable of inheriting his estate or title.

His amours were too notorious to be concealed, and too scandalous to be justified, by saying he was bred in the latitude of foreign climates, and now lived in a vicious age and court; where his accusers of this crime were as guilty as himself. He lay under so ill a name for this, that whenever he was shut up in his chamber, as he loved to be, nescio quid, or in his laboratory, meditans purgationem, over the fumes of charcoal, it was said to be with women. When a dirty chemist, a foxhunter, a pretender to poetry or politicks, a rehearsal should entertain him, when a messenger to summon him to council could not be admitted.

This is true of him, that of all the noise made of his loving women, he never had so much as a bastard laid to his charge, that he or any body else believed to be his own. Some pretended to love his person, but it was his estate, which smarted for it. It is hard to tell by his expence which was his favourite pleasure, I think, his thisymy at home, and fox-hunting abroad.

I will concude his character with saying, that if human fraility will not excuse these faults, let christian charity oblige us to hope, that as God gave him two of the grace of true repentance.

We are now come to the last scene of the tragi-comedy of his life. At the death of king Charles he went into the country to his own manor of Helmesly, the seat of the earls of Rutland in Yorkshire. King Charles was his best friend, he loved him and excused his faults. He was not so well assured of his successor. In the country he passed his time in hunting, and entertaining his friends; which he did a fortnight before his death as pleasantly and hospitably as ever he did in his life. He took cold one day after fox-hunting, by sitting on the cold ground, which cast him into an ague and fever, of which he died, after three days sickness, at a tenant’s house, Kirby more side, a lordship of his own, near Helmesly, Ap. 16, 1688; stat. 60.

The day before his death he sent to his old servant Mr. Brian Fairfax, to desire him to provide him a bed at his house at Bishop-hill at York, but the next morning the same man returned with the news that his life was despaired of. Mr. Fairfax went post, but before he got to him he was speechless. The earl of Arran, son to duke Hamilton, was with him; who, hearing he was sick, visited him in his way to Scotland.

When Mr. Fairfax came, the duke knew him, look’d earnestly at him, and held him by the hand, but could not speak. Mr. Fairfax ask’d a gentleman there present, a justice of peace, and a worthy discreet man in the neighbourhood, what he had said or done before he became speechless. He told me some questions had been asked him about his estate, to which he gave no answer. Then he was admonished of the danger he was in, which he seemed not to apprehend; he was ask'd, if he would have the minister of the parish sent for to pray with him, to which he gave no answer; which made another question be asked, If he would have a popish priest; to which he answered with great vehemence, no, no! repeating the words, He would have nothing to do with them. Then the aforesaid gentleman, Mr. Gibson, ask'd him again if he would have the minister sent for, and he calmly answered, Yes, pray send for him. This was the morning and he died that night. The minister came, and did the office required by the church; the duke devoutly attending it, and received the sacrament, and an hour after became speechless: but appearing sensible, we had the prayers of the church repeated by his bed-side, recommending him to the mercy of God, through the merits of Jesus Christ.

Thus he died quietly in his bed, the fate of few of his predecessors in the title of Buckingham. His body was embalmed and brought to Westminster-abbey, and there laid in the vault with his father and brothers, in Hen. the VIIth's chapel.

Mary duchess of Buckingham was the only daughter of Thomas lord Fairfax, and Ann, the daughter of Horace Lord Vere. A most virtuous and pious lady, in a virtuous age and court. If she had any of the vanities, she had certainly none of the vices of it. The duke and she lived lovingly and decently together; she patientely bearing with those faults in him which she could not remedy. She survived him many years, and died near St. James at Westminster, and was buried in the vault of the family of Villiers, in Hen. VIth's chapel, anno 1795. [estat. 66.

2. The following, in grisly contrast to Fairfax's account, comes from Lord Peterborough.

The witty Duke of Buckingham was an extreme bad man. His duel with Lord Shrewsbury was concerted between him and Lady Shrewsbury. All that morning she was trembling for her gallant, and wishing the death of her husband; and, after his fall, 'tis said the duke slept with her in his bloody shirt.—Spence's Anecdotes, Malone's Edition, 1830, p. 164.

3. Ed. G. Burnet, in his History of my own Times, gives this character:—

He had a great liveliness of wit, and a peculiar faculty of turning all things into ridicule with bold figures and natural descriptions. He had no sort of literature: Only he was drawn into chemistry: And for some years he thought he was very near the finding the philosopher's stone: which had the effect that attends on all such men as he was, when they are drawn in, to lay out for it. He had no principles of religion, vertue, or friendship. Pleasure, frolick, or extravagant diversion was all that he laid to heart. He was true to nothing, for he was not true to himself. He had no steadiness nor conduct. He could keep no secret, nor execute any design without spoiling it. He could never fix his thoughts, nor govern his estate, tho' then the greatest in England. He was bred about the King: And for many years he had a great ascendent over him: But he spake of him to all persons with that contempt, that at last he drew a lasting disgrace upon himself. And he at length ruined both body and mind, fortune and reputation equally. The madness of vice appeared in his person in very eminent instances; since at last he became contemptible and poor, sickly, and sunk in his parts, as well as in all other respects, so that his conversation was as much avoided as ever it had been courted. He found the King, when he came from his travels in the year 45, newly come to Paris, sent over by his father when his affairs declined: And finding the King enough inclined to receive ill impressions, he, who was then got into all the impieties and vices of the age, set himself to corrupt the King, in which he was too successful, being seconded in that wicked design by the Lord Percy. And to compleat the matter, Hobbs was brought to him, under the pretence of instructing him in mathematicks: And he laid before him his schemes, both with relation to religion and politics, which made deep and lasting impressions on the King's mind. So that the main blame of the King's ill principles, and bad morals, was owing to the Duke of Buckingham. i. 100. Ed. 1724.

* Court Grammont, in his Memoirs, thus sketches him about the year 1663.
At this time the king's attachment to Miss Stewart (afterwards privately married to the Duke of Richmond, which marriage was publicly declared in Apr. 1667) was so public, that every person perceived, that if she was but possessed of art, she might become as absolute a mistress over his conduct as she was over his heart. This was a fine opportunity for those who had experience and ambition. The Duke of Buckingham formed the design of governing her in order to ingratiate himself with the king; God knows what a governor he would have been, and what a head he was possessed of, to guide another; however, he was the properest man in the world to insinuate himself with Miss Stewart; she was childish in her behaviour, and laughed at every thing; and her taste for frivolous amusements, though unaffected, was only allowable in a girl about twelve or thirteen years old. A child, however, she was, in every other respect, except playing with a doll: blind-man's buff was her most favourite amusement; she was building castles of cards, while the deepest play was going on in her apartments, where you saw her surrounded by eager courtiers, who handed her the cards, or young architects, who endeavoured to imitate her.

She had, however, a passion for music, and had some taste for singing. The Duke of Buckingham, who built the finest towers of cards imaginable, had an agreeable voice, he had no averse to scandal; he made songs, and invented old women's stories with which she was delighted; but his particular talent consisted in turning into ridicule whatever was ridiculous in other people, and in taking them off, even in their presence, without their perceiving it. In short, he knew how to act all parts, with so much grace and pleasantry, that it was difficult to do without him, when he had a mind to make himself agreeable; and he made himself so necessary to Miss Stewart's amusement, that she sent all over the town to seek for him, when he did not attend the king to her apartments.

He was extremely handsome, and still thought himself much more so than he really was; although he had a great deal of discernment; yet his vanity made him mistake some civilities as intended for his person, which were only bestowed on his wit and drollery. pp. 147-2. Ed. 1846.

5. Samuel Butler, Author of Hudibras, in a collection of Characters chiefly written between 1667 and 1669, in Wales; but first printed by R. Teyler, in Genuine Remaines, in 1759, has the following one, entitled A Duke of Bucks.

Is one that has studied the whole Body of Vice. His Parts are disproportionately to the whole, and like a Monster he has more of some, and less of others than he should have. He has pulled down all that Fabric that Nature raised in him, and built himself up again after a Model of his own. He has dam'd up all those Lights, that Nature made into the noblest Prospects of the World, and opened other little blind Loopholes backward, by turning Day into Night, and Night into Day. His Appetite to his Pleasures is diseased and crazy, like the Pica in a Woman, that longs to eat that, which was never made for Food, or a Girl in the Green-sickness, that eats Chalk and Mortar. Perpetual Surfeits of Pleasure have filled his Mind with bad and vicious Humours (as well as his Body with a Nursery of Diseases) which makes him affect new and extravagant Ways, as being sick and tired with the Old. Continual Wine, Women, and Music put false Values upon Things, which by Custom become habitual, and debauch his Understanding so, that he retains no right Notion nor Sense of Things. And as the same Dose of the same Physic has no Operation on those, that are much used to it; so his Pleasures require a larger Proportion of Excess and Variety, to render him sensible of them. He rises, eats, and goes to Bed by the Julian Account, long after all others that go by the new Stile; and keeps the same Hours with Owls and the Anthropods. He is a great Observer of the Tartars Customs, and never eats, till the great Cham having dined makes Proclamation, that all the World may go to Dinner. He does not dwell in his House, but haunt[s] it, like an evil Spirit, that walks all Night to disturb the Family, and never appears by Day. He lives perpetually benighted, runs out of his Life, and loses his Time, as Men do their Ways in the Dark; and as blind Men are led by their Dogs, so is he governed by some mean Servant or other, that relates to his Pleasures. He is as inconstant as the Moon, which he lives under; and altho' he does nothing but advise with his Pillow.
Introduction.

Many others [i.e. Plays] were Acted by the Old Company at the Theatre Royal, from the time they begun, till the Patent descended to Mr. Charles Killigrew, which in 1682, he join'd it to Dr. Davenant's Patent, whose Company Acted then in Dorset Garden, which upon the Union, were the King's Company: After which, Mr. Hart Acted no more, having a Pension to the Day of his Death, from the United Company.

Next follows an Account of the Rise and Progression, of the Dukes Servants; under the Patent of Sir William Davenant who upon the said Junction in 1682, remov'd to the Theatre Royal in Drury-Lane, and Created the King's Company.

In the Year 1659, General Monk, Marching then his Army out of Scotland to London, Mr. Rhodes a Bookeller being Wardrobe-Keeper formerly (as I am inform'd) to King Charles the First's, Company of Comedians in Black-Friars; getting a Licence from the then Governing State, fitted up a Houfe then for Acting call'd the Cock Pit in Drury-Lane, and in a short time Compleated his Company.\footnote{p. 16.}

In this Interim, Sir William Davenant gain'd a Patent from the King, and Created Mr. Betterton and all the rest of Rhodes's Company, the King's Servants; who were Sworn by my Lord Mancheffer then Lord Chamberlain, to Serve his Royal Highness the Duke of York, at the Theatre in Lincoln's-Inn Fields.\footnote{p. 17.}

His Company being now Compleat, Sir William in order to prepare Plays to Open his Theatre, it being then a Building in Lincoln's-Inn Fields, His Company Rehears'd the First and Second Part of 'The Siege of Rhodes'; and 'The Wits' at Potheacaries-Hall: And in Spring 1662, Open'd his Houfe with the said Plays, having new Scenes and Decorations, being the firt that c'ere were Introduce'd in England.\footnote{p. 19.}

These being all the Principal, which we call'd Stock-Plays; that were Acted from the Time they Open'd the Theatre in 1662, to the beginning of May 1665, at which time the Plague began to Rage: The Company ceas'd Acting; till the Christmases after the Fire in 1666.\footnote{p. 20.}

The new Theatre in Dorset-Garden being Finish'd, and our Company after Sir William's [Davenant] Death, being under the Rule and Dominion of his Widow the Lady Davenant, Mr Betterton, and Mr Harris, (Mr Charles Davenant her Son Acting for her) they remov'd from Lincoln's-Inn-Fields thither. And on the Ninth Day of November 1671, they open'd their new Theatre with Sir Martin Marral.\footnote{p. 21.}

All the preceding Plays, being the chief that were Acted in Dorset-Garden, from November 1671, to the Year 1682; at which time the Patentees of each Company United Patents, and by fo Incorporating the Duke's Company were Made the King's Company, and immediately remov'd to the Theatre Royal in Drury-Lane.\footnote{p. 22.}
Introduction.

Such is the history, by an eye-witness, of the London stage soon after the Restoration.

The then general state of society and town life is described in the third chapter of Lord Macaulay's History of England. At present we have only to deal with one particular fashion of dramatic composition—the new, grandiloquent, bombastic, pseudo-heroic plays, introduced by D'Avenant, and having for their master-writer Dryden. It is impossible here to measure the extravagance of these plays: somewhat, however, may be gathered from the Illustrations to the present work.

Associated with this was the inordinate use of rhyming verse. Dryden in early life fought the battle of rhyme against Sir Robert Howard; only afterwards publicly to abandon it, in his Lines to the Earl of Roscommon, in 1680.

To ridicule these rhyming mouthing plays and with not a little personality—after the common custom of that time—to attack their authors, were the chief objects of Villiers and his coadjutors in writing The Rehearsal. Its merit however is as much in its conception as in its execution: in seeing that the popular rant was rant, and in determining to expose it: as in writing the studied nonsense of which this play is so largely composed. Hence, the importance of The Rehearsal in our national literature, is not so much from its intrinsic merits, most laughable as are some of the parodies; but from its marking—despite a partial failure to influence at the time—a bend in the stream of dramatic composition.

Two scholars, who have well studied this portion of our literary history, give the following accounts of this play.

Edmond Malone, in his Life of Dryden, thus writes:

The great success which had attended Dryden's heroic plays, doubtless excited the jealousy of the rival candidates for fame. In this class, however, we cannot place Villiers, Duke of Buckingham, who was so far from exercising his pen in any performance of that kind, that he thought the loud applause which had been bestowed for some years on the rhyming tragedies produced
A more recent editor, Mr. Robert Bell in his "Annotations prefixed to his Dramatic Works," gives an account of the present play.

Bayes not only enjoys the credit of having introduced what are called Don Quixote plays; Dryden established them. The Introduction.

called heroic because they were written in a language elevated above nature, and exhibit passion in a state of maniacal ecstacy. These pieces had now held possession of the stage some nine or ten years, when the Duke of Buckingham undertook to expose their absurdities in The Rehearsal, produced in the winter of 1671. It is said that he was afflicted in the design by Butler, Sprat, Clifford, and others. This is probable enough, from the structure of the ridicule, which resembles a piece of mosaic work. Davenant was originally meant for the hero, but his recent death seems to have led to the sublimation of Dryden, who was on other accounts a more conspicuous mark for this sort of satire. Not satisfied with parading some of the most familiar passages in Dryden’s plays, the Duke of Buckingham took considerable pains in teaching Lacy, who performed Bayes, to mimic his author in his manner of reciting them. Dryden was notoriously a bad reader, and had a hesitating and tedious delivery, which, skilfully imitated in lines of surpassing fury and extravagance, must have produced an irresistible effect upon the audience. The humour was enhanced by the drees, gesticulations, and by-play of the actor, which presented a close imitation of his original. Dryden bore this unwarrantable attack in silence; being fully conscious, no doubt, that so far as it reflected upon his plays it was unanswerable. But he afterwards showed that he had a keen sense of the obligations the duke had laid him under on this occasion, and he discharged them in full, with compound interest, in his Absalom and Achitophel.

The town was highly amused, although its taste was not in the least degree corrected, by The Rehearsal. Heroic plays continued to flourish as long as Dryden continued to write them; a drudgery which his necessities imposed upon him for several years afterwards.

Milton died on the 8th of November, 1674.†

Five editions of The Rehearsal appeared in the Author’s life time. Of the second and third I cannot learn even the dates. There is a copy of the fourth, 1683, in the Bodleian. An examination of the fifth, 1687, would seem to show a general permanence of the text, but that, probably in each edition, there were here and there additions and alterations en bloc, infligted by the appearance of fresh heroic plays: some of these additions increase, with the multiplying corruption of the times, in personallity and moral offfensivenes. For our literary history, the first edition is sufficient. That, the reader now has,

BIBLIOGRAPHY.—'THE REHEARSAL.'

* Editions not seen. † Editions having the 'Key' either before or after the text. § having the 'Key' in footnotes.

(a) Issues in the Author's lifetime.

5. 1687. London. 1 vol. 4to. Title as No. 1. 'The Fifth Edition with Amendments and large Additions by the Author.'

(b) Issues since the Author's death.

10. 1710. London. 1 vol. 8vo. 'The Rehearsal': a Comedy Written by his Grace, GEORGE late Duke of BUCKINGHAM to expose some Plays then in vogue, and their Authors. With a Key and Remarks, necessary to illustrate the most material passages of this piece, and to point out the authors and Writings here exposed. Never Printed with it before. London Printed in the year 1710.

II. With other Works.

17. 1787. London. The Rehearsal: A Comedy as it is acted at the Theatres Royal in Drury Lane and Covent Garden.

* This list is imperfect.
There is no authoritative explanation of the allusions and parodies in the present play. All that can be done is to summarize the successive attempts at its exposition.

1. Twenty years after its appearance, but in Dryden's life-time: GERARD LANGDALE gives this account of it, in his Eng. Dram. Poets. Okenford, p. 540. Ed. 1691. Rehearsal, a Comedy acted at the Theatre-Royal; printed [4th Edit.] quart. Lond. 1683. This Play is ascribed to the Late Duke of Buckingham, and will ever be valued by Ingenious Men. There are some who pretend to furnish a Clavis to it; my Talent not lying to Politicks, I know no more of it, than that the Author lashes several Plays of Mr. Dryden: As Congest of Granads, Tyrannick Love, Love in a Nunnery, and some passages of other Plays; as The Siege of Rhodes, Virgin Widow, Slighted Maid, Villain, English Monster, &c.

2. Dean Lockyer in Spenes Anecdotes, p. 63. Ed. 1820, remarks. The Rehearsal (one of the best pieces of criticism that ever was) and Butler's inimitable poem of Hudibras, must be quite lost to the readers in a century more, if not soon well commended. Tonson has a good Key to the former, but refuses to print it, because he had been so much obliged to Dryden.

3. Only two Keys have ever been printed: it may be well to consider their respective histories, before we take them in connection with the text.

(a) In 1704, in the first edition of Villiers' works in 8vo, of which I cannot learn of any copy anywhere, appeared—S. BRISCOE'S Key, which has been very often reprinted; at first separate from the text in 1710, next with it as footnotes; see opposite page.

(b) June 12, 1761. Bp. T. Percy entered into an agreement with Mess. Tonson, to publish an edition of the Works of George Villiers, the 2d Duke of Buckingham, for which he received 52 guineas. J. Nichols Lit. Anec. 18th Cent. iii. 758. Ed. 1762.

On 15 Jan. 1762, Bp. Percy thus writes to Dr. Birch:

I ought to blush for having detained your books so long; but one work has been delayed through the expectation of enlarging the stock of materials. The 'Key to the Rehearsal' has long been printed off, all but the last sheet, which we still keep open to receive some additions that we take for granted will be picked up from a play of Edward Howard's, entitled 'Six Days Adventure, or the New Utopia, 1671' if we can once be so lucky as to light upon it. This is the only play of that age which I have not seen. Mr. Garrick unfortunately has not got it in his collection, and Mr. Tonson has advertised a small premium for it, hitherto without success. It is only scarce because it is worthless; and therefore, if chance should throw it in your way, may I intreat the favour of you to procure me a sight of it?—J. B. Nichols. III. of Lit. Hist. vii. 572. Ed. 1848.

I have at length been able to collect for your Lordship the sheets of Lord Surrey and the Duke of Buckingham. They have been printed off about 25 years. Since the death of Jacob Tonson, at whose instance they were undertaken, and who ought to have assigned them to other persons, they have been wholly discontinued. My fondness for these pursuits declining, I laid both these works aside, till I could offer them to some younger editor than myself, who could with more propriety resume them. I have now an ingenious nephew, of both my names, who is a fellow of St. John's College, in Oxford, and both able and desirous to complete them. To him I have given all the sheets so long since printed off, and whatever papers I had upon the subject.

Of the 'Duke of Buckingham' Tonson wished to have every thing collected which had ever been ascribed to him; but I believe I shall only recommend to my nephew to publish what is numbered vol. 1. in the sheets now offered to your Lordship. Between the 'Rehearsal' and the 'Key' were once printed the 'Chances' and the 'Restoration'; but the intermediate sheets have been cancelled and consigned to the trunk-makers. And the same fate ILUSTRATIONS, &c.

1 Dryden, in his preatory Essay Of Heroique Plays to The Conquest of Granada, Ed. 1672, thus gives the origin of the new way of writing plays.

"For Heroick Plays, (in which oney I have us'd it [i.e., Rhyme] without the mixture of Profe) the first light we had of them on the English Theatre was from the late Sir William D'Avenant: It being forbidden him in the Rebellious times to act Tragedies and Comedies, because they contain'd some matter of Scandal to those good people, who could more easily dispossess their lawful Sovereign then endure a wanton jieft; he was forc'd to turn his thoughts another way; and to introduce the examples of moral vertue, writ in verse, and perform'd in Recitative Musique. The Original of this musick and of the Scenes which adorn'd his work, he had from the Italian Operas: but he heighten'd his Charact'ers (as I may probably imagine) from the example of Corneille and some French Poets. In this Condition did this part of Poetry remain at his Majesties return. When growing bolder, as being now own'd by a publick Authority, he review'd his Siege of Rh'd's, and caus'd it to be acted as a just Drama; but as few men have the happinesfs to begin and finifh any new project, so neither did he live to make his design perfect."

2 (d) GERARD LANGBAINE gives this account of Lighter:

A Comedian whose Abilities in Action were sufficiently known to all that frequented the King's Theatre, where he was for many years an Actor, and perform'd all Parts that he undertook to a miracle; insomuch that I am apt to believe, that as this Age never had, so the next never will have his Equal, at least not his Superior. He was so well prov'd of by King Charles the Second, an undeniable Judge in Dramatick Arts, that he caus'd his Picture to be drawn, in three several Figures in the fame Table, viz. That of Tragedy in the Committee, Mr. Scuffle in The Cheats, and M. Galliard, in The Variety: which piece is full in being in Windsor Castle. Nor did his Talent wholly lye in Acting, he knew both how to judge and write Plays: and if his Comedies are somewhat allied to French Farce, 'tis out of choice, rather than want of Ability to write true Comedy.

Lacy wrote four Comedies, printed in the following years:—

Dumb Lady, or The Farriar made Phyfitian, 1672, 4to.
Old Troop, or Monsieur Ragoo, 1672, 4to.
Savoy the Scot, or The Taming of a Shrew, 1677, 4to.
Sir Hercules Buffoon, or The Poetical Squire, 1684, 4to.

(b) Dean Lockier, in Spence's ANECDOTES, p. 63, Ed. 1820, says:

It is incredible what pains Buckingham took with one of the Actors, to teach him to speak some passages in Bayes' part, in The Rehearsal right.

This actor was Lacy, see p. 16.
PROLOGUE.

We might well call this short Mock-play of ours
A Poëse made of Weeds instead of Flowers;
Yet such have been presented to your noses,
And there are such, I fear, who thought 'em Rofes.
Would some of 'em were here, to see, this night,
What stuff it is in which they took delight.
Here, brisk, insipid Blakes, for wit, let fall
Sometimes dull fence; but oft'ner, none at all:
There, flouting Heroes, with a grim-fac'd train.
Shall brave the Gods, in King Cambyse's vain.
For (changing Rules, of late, as if men writ
In spite of Reason, Nature, Art, and Wit)
Our Poets make us laugh at Tragedy;
And with their Comedies they make us cry.
Now, Critiques, do your worst, that here are met;
For, like a Rook, I have hedg'd in my Bet.
If you approve; I shall assume the rate
Of those high-flyers whom I imitate:
And juftly too; for I will shew you more
Than ever they vouchf'd to shew before:
I will both represent the feats they do,
And give you all their reasons for 'em too.
Some honour to me will from this arise.
But if, by my endeavours, you grow wise,
And what was once so prais'd you now despise;
Then I'll cry out, swell'd with Poétique rage,
'Tis I, John Lacy,* have reform'd your Stage.

---
languages, and had thereby an advantage, which perhaps no former compiler ever had, in having all his materials ready collected to his hands. He had nothing to do but sit down and examine: he accordingly read over every play, which the Duke could be supposed to have in his eye; chiefly all such as were either published or revived from the time of the Restoration till the publication of the Rehearsal: for tho' the Duke's view was chiefly to satirize what was then called “the new way of writing,” yet he often exposes absurdities of longer standing, chiefly when the plays, which contained them, had been revived several times, and still continued to captivate the publick.

How far the research upon the whole has been successful the Reader will judge from the following pages. He will find many obscurities removed; and numerous references recovered: far more of both than could reasonably be expected, considering that no assistance could be had but what is fetched from books, and that all personal information has been long since swallowed up in the gulf of time. It must however be acknowledged that our inquiries have not always been successful: Some passages still remain that evidently allude to absurdities then current upon the stage, yet of which we could find no traces in any play then published. But this is no more than might be expected: We have that one play, * which the Duke has professedly ridiculed, was damned in the representation and therefore never printed; and the same might also be the case with others. Again the authors might remove the offensive passages from such plays as they published, so that no appearance of them is now remaining. After all, we are not to suppose that so masterly a pencil, as the Duke's, when finishing such a character as that of Hay's, would be confined to a mere dead likeness: he would not fail to heighten the caricature with a thousand touches supplied from his own fancy, and bring in whatever served to render the piece complete, whether it resembled the original or not.

Altho' the former key was faulty, it contained some particulars too valuable to be suppressed; we have therefore inserted the several articles everywhere in our own, taking care to correct the mistakes, and distinguishing every such article by an asterisk (*). We have also retained the former preface; as it preserved the memory of certain facts necessary to the illustration of the Rehearsal, and not found anywhere else.

We next give Beaumont's address.

The Publisher to the Reader.

THOU canst not be ignorant, that the town has had an eager expectation of a Key to the Rehearsal ever since it first appeared in print; and none has more earnestly desired it than myself, tho' in vain: Till lately a gentleman of my acquaintance recommended me to a person, who he believed could give me a further light into this matter, than I had hitherto met with from any hand.

In a short time I traced him out; and when I had found him, he appeared such a positive dogmatical spark, that I began to repent of my trouble in searching after him.

It was my misfortune over a pot of beer to begin a short discourse of the modern poets and actors: and immediately he fell into a great passion, and swore, that there were very few persons now living, who deserved the name of a good dramatick poet, or a natural actor; and declared against the present practice of the English stage with much violence; saying, he believed the two companies were joined in a confederacy against Smithfield, and resolved to ruin their fair, by out-doing them in their bombastick bills, and ridiculous representing their plays; adding, that he hoped ere long M. Collier and others would write them down to the devil. At the same time, he could not forbear to extol the excellent decorum and action of former years; and magnified the poets of the last age, especially Johnson, Shakspeare, and Beaumont.

I bore all this with tolerable patience, knowing it to be too common with old men to commend the past age, and rail at the present; and so took my

* The United Kingdoms, by Col. Henry Howard. See pp. 46 and 90.

Continued at p. 32.
Sm1. Indeed, I have ever observed, that your grave lookers are the dullest of men.

Johns. I, and of Birds, and Beasts too: your grave-Bird is an Owl, and your grave Beast is an As.

Sm1. Well; but how dost thou pass thy time?

Johns. Why, as I use to do; eat and drink as well as I can, have a She-friend to be private with in the afternoon, and sometimes see a Play: where there are such things (Frank) such hideous, monstrous things, that it has almost made me forswear the Stage, and resolve to apply my felf to the solid nonience of your pretenders to Business, as the more ingenious pastime.

Sm1. I have heard, indeed, you have had lately many new Plays, and our Country-wits commend 'em.

Johns. I, so do some of our City-wits too; but they are of the new kind of Wits.

Sm1. New kind? what kind is that?

Johns. Why, your Blade, your frank Persons, your Drolls: fellows that scorn to imitate Nature, but are given altogether to elevate and surprize.

Sm1. Elevate, and surprize? pr'ythee make me understand the meaning of that.

Johns. Nay, by my troth, that's a hard matter: I don't understand that my self. 'Tis a phrase they have got among them, to express their no-meaning by. I'll tell you, as well as I can, what it is. Let me see; 'tis Fighting, Loving, Sleeping, Rhyming, Dying, Dancing, Singing, Crying; and every thing, but Thinking and Sence.

Mr. Bayes pass'd er the Stage.

Bayes. Your most obsequious, and most observant, very servant, Sir.

Johns. Godfo, this is an Author: I'll fetch him to you.

Sm1. Nay, pr'ythee let him alone.

Johns. Nay, by the Lord, I'll have him. [Goes after him.] Here he is. I have caught him. Pray, Sir, for my sake, will you do a favour to this friend of mine?
'In fine, it shall read, and write, and act, and plot, and shew, ay, and pit, box, and gallery, I gad, with any Play in Europe.

The usual language of the Honourable Edward Howard, Esq.; at the Rehearsal of his Plays. Key, 1704.
Bayes. Sir, it is not within my small capacity to do favours, but receive 'em; especially from a person that does wear the honourable Title you are pleas'd to impose, Sir, upon this.——Sweet Sir, your servant.

Smt. Your humble servant, Sir.

Johns. But wilt thou do me a favour, now?

Bayes. I, Sir: What is't?

Johns. Why, to tell him the meaning of thy last Play.

Bayes. How, Sir, the meaning? do you mean the Plot.

Johns. I, I; any thing.

Bayes. Faith, Sir, the Intrigo's now quite out of my head; but I have a new one, in my pocket, that I may say is a Virgin; 't has never yet been blown upon. I must tell you one thing, 'Tis all new Wit; and, though I say it, a better than my last: and you know well enough how that took. 'In fine, it shall read, and write, and act, and plot, and shew, ay, and pit, box and gallery, I gad, with any Play in Europe. This morning is its last Rehearsal, in their habits, and all that, as it is to be acted; and if you, and your friend will do it but the honour to see it in its Virgin attire; though, perhaps, it may blush, I shall not be ashamed to discover its nakedness unto you.——I think it is o' this fide.

[puts his hand in his pocket.

Johns. Sir, I confess I am not able to answer you in this new way; but if you please to lead, I shall be glad to follow you; and I hope my friend will do so too.

Smt. I, Sir, I have no business so considerable, as should keep me from your company.

Bayes. Yes, here it is. No, cry you mercy: this is my book of Drama Common places; the Mother of many other Plays.

Johns. Drama Common places! pray what's that?

Bayes. Why, Sir, some certain helps, that we men of Art have found it convenient to make use of.

Smt. How, Sir, help for Wit?

Bayes. I, Sir, that's my position. And I do here
'He who writ this, not without pains and thought
From French and English Theaters has brought Th' exactest Rules by which a Play is wrought.

II.
The Unties of Action, Place, and Time;
The Scenes unbroken; and a mingled chime
Of Johnsons humour, with Corneilles rhyme.
J. Dryden, Prologue to Secret Love, or the Maiden Queen. Ed. 1668.

"In Dryden's lifetime, Gerard Langraine, in his Account Secret Love or The Maiden Queen, says:—I cannot pass by his making use of Bayes's Art of Transferring, as any one may observe by comparing the Fourth Stanza of his First Prologue, with the last Paragraph of the Preface of Ibrahim.
The title of this work, is as follows: "Ibrahim. Or the Illustrious Bajza. An excellent new Romance. The whole Work, in four Parts. Written in French by Monsieur de Scudery. And now Englished by Henry Cogan, gent. London 1652." The paragraph referred to, runs thus:—

Behold, Reader, that which I had to say to you, but what defence ever I have imployed, I know that it is of works of this nature, as of a place of war, where notwithstanding all the care the Engineer hath brought to fortifie it, there is always some weak part found, which he hath not dream'd of, and whereby it is assaulted; but this shall not surprize me; for as I have not forgot that I am a man, no more have I forgot that I am subject to erre

This is thus verified in the fourth stanza of the same Prologue.

IV.
Plays are like Towns, which how e're fortify'd
By Engineers, have still some weaker side
By the o're-teen Defendant unesp'y'd.
averr, That no man yet the Sun e'er flowne upon, has parts sufficient to furnish out a Stage, except it be with the help of these my Rules.¹

JOHNS. What are these Rules, I pray?

BAYES. Why, Sir, my first Rule is the Rule of Trans-version,² or Regula Duplex: changing Verse into Prose, or Prose into Verse, alternative as you please.

SMI. How's that, Sir, by a Rule, I pray?

BAYES. Why, thus, Sir; nothing more easie when understood: I take a Book in my hand, either at home, or elsewhere, for that's all one, if there be any Wit in't, as there is no Book but has some, I Transverse it; that is, if it be Prose, put it into Verse, (but that takes up some time) if it be Verse, put it into Prose.

JOHNS. Methinks, Mr. Bayes, that putting Verse into Prose should be call'd Transprosing.

BAYES. By my troth, a very good Notion, and hereafter it shall be so.

SMI. Well, Sir, and what d'ye do with it then?

BAYES. Make it my own. 'Tis so alter'd that no man can know it. My next Rule is the Rule of Record, and by way of Table-Book. Pray observe.

JOHNS. Well, we hear you: go on.

BAYES. As thus. I come into a Coffee-house, or some other place where wittie men refort, I make as if I minded nothing; (do you mark?) but as soon as any one speaks, pop I flapp it down, and make that, too, my own.

JOHNS. But, Mr. Bayes, are not you sometimes in danger of their making you restore, by force, what you have gotten thus by Art?

BAYES. No, Sir; the world's unmindful: they never take notice of these things.

SMI. But pray, Mr. Bayes, among all your other Rules, have you no one Rule for Invention?

BAYES. Yes, Sir; that's my third Rule that I have here in my pocket.

SMI. What Rule can that be?
BIBLIOGRAPHY. KEYS TO 'THE REHEARSAL.'

Continued from page 38.

leave of him for that time, with an intent never to trouble him more without acquainting him with my business.

When next I saw the gentleman my friend, who recommended him to me, I told him how I was entertained by his cynical acquaintance. He laugh but bid me not be discouraged; saying, that fit of railing would soon have been over, and when his just indignation had spent itself, you might have parted your business to him, and received a more satisfactory account. However, said he, go to him again from me, take him to the Tavern, and mollify his asperity with a bottle; thwart not his discourse, but give him his own way, and I'll warrant you, he'll open his budget, and satisfy your expectation.

I followed my friend's directions, and found the event answerable to his prediction.

Not long after, I met him in Fleet Street, and carried him to the Old Devil; and ere we had emptied one bottle, I found him of a quite different humour from what I left him in the time before; he appeared in his discourse to be a very honest true Englishman, a hearty lover of his country, and the government thereof, both in church and state, a loyal subject to his sovereign, an enemy to popery and tyranny, idolatry and superstition, antimonarchical government and confusion, irreligion and enthusiasm. In short, I found him a person of a competent knowledge in the affair I went to him about, and one who understood the English Stage very well; and tho' somewhat positive, as I said before, yet I observed he always took care to have truth on his side, before he affirmed or denied anything with more than ordinary heat; and when he was so guarded, he was immoveable.

When I had discovered thus much, and called for the second bottle. I told him from whom I came, and the cause of my addressing to him. He desired my patience till he stepped to his lodgings, which were near the tavern; and after a short space he returned, and brought with him the papers, which contain the following notes.

When he had read them to me. I liked them so well, that I desired the printing of them, provided they were genuine. He assured me they were, and told me farther:

That while this farce was composing and altering, he had frequent occasions of being with the author, of perusing his papers, and hearing him discourse of the several plays he exposed, and their authors; insomuch that few persons had the like opportunities of knowing his true meaning, as he himself had.

If any other persons had known the author's mind so exactly, in all the several particulars, 'tis more than probable they would have been made publick before now: but nothing of this nature having appeared these two and thirty years; (for so long has this farce flourished in print) we may reasonably and safely conclude, that there is no other such like copy in being; and that these remarks are genuine, and taken from the great Person's own mouth and papers.

I was very well satisfied with this account, and more desirous to print it than ever; only I told him, I thought it would be very advantageous to the sale of these Annotations, to have a Preface to them, under the Name of him, who was so well acquainted with the Author; but could not, by all the arguments I was master of, obtain his Consent, tho' we debated the point a pretty while.

He alleges'd for his excuse, that such an undertaking would be very improper for him, because he should be forced to name several persons, and some of great families, to whom he had been obliged; and he was very unwilling to offend any person of quality, or run the hazard of making such who are, or may be his friends, become his enemies; tho' he should only act the part of an historian, barely reciting the words he heard from our Author.

However, said he, if you think a preface of such absolute necessity, you may easily recollect matter enough from the discourse which hath passed between us, on this subject, to enable yourself, or any other for you, to write one; especially if you consider there are but two topics to be insisted on.

Continued at page 39.
ACT. I.

THE REHEARSAL.

BYYES. Why, Sir, when I have any thing to invent, I never trouble my head about it, as other men do; but presently turn o’er this Book, and there I have, at one view, all that Perseus, Montaigne, Seneca’s Tragedies, Horace, Juvenal, Claudian, Pliny, Plutarch’s lives, and the rest, have ever thought, upon this subject; and so, in a trice, by leaving out a few words, or putting in others of my own, the business is done.

JOHNS. Indeed, Mr. Bayes, this is as sure, and compendious a way of Wit as ever I heard of.

BYYES. I, Sirs, when you come to write your selves, o’ my word you’ll find it so. But, Gentlemen, if you make the least scruple of the efficacy of these my Rules, do but come to the Play-house, and you shall judge of ’em by the effects.

Snt. We’ll follow you, Sir. [Exeunt.

Enter three Players upon the Stage.

1 Play. Have you your part perfect?
2 Play. Yes, I have it without book; but I do not understand how it is to be spoken.
3 Play. And mine is such a one, as I can’t guefs for my life what humour I’m to be in: whether angry, melancholy, merry, or in love. I don’t know what to make on’t.

1 [Play.] Phoo! the Author will be here presently, and he’l tell us all. You must know, this is the new way of writing; and these hard things please forty times better than the old plain way. For, look you, Sir, the grand design upon the Stage is to keep the Auditors in suspense; for to guefs presently at the plot, and the fence, tires ’em before the end of the first Act: now, here, every line surprises you, and brings in new matter. And, then, for Scenes, Cloaths and Dancing, we put ’em quite down, all that ever went before us: and these are the things, you know, that are essentiel to a Play.

2 Play. Well, I am not of thy mind; but, so it gets us money, ’tis no great matter.
The Post of Amaryllis was acted by Mrs. Ann Reeve, who, at that time, was kept by Mr. Bayes. — Key 1704.

The transference of Dryden's plays involves no palliation or defence. He wrote for a bi-polar stage in a peevish age, and supplied, much to his own advantage, the kind of material the vicious taste of his audiences demanded. It will serve his reputation to convert his productions in this way with those of those who never claimed transcendence in depravity. But there is little reprehension for all his goodness in turning from his plays to his life, and marking the contrast. The morality of his life—the practical test of his heart and his understanding—was unimpeachable. The ingenuity of slander was swallowed in assailing his principles, and exposing his person to obloquy, but the morality of his life emerged pure out of the furnace. The only hint of internal indication attributed to him is that of having eaten tarts with Mrs. Reeve the actress, in the Mulberry garden, which, if true, amounts to nothing, but which, trivial as it is, must be regarded as apocryphal. To eat tarts with an actress did not necessarily involve any grave delinquency in a poet who was writing for the theatres; yet upon this slight foundation, for I have not been able to discover that it rests upon any other, a suspicion has been raised, that Mrs. Reeve was his mistress. My way, however, of mitigating the odium of this unapparent imputation, it is added, that after his marriage Dryden triumphed all such accusations. But his relations with Mrs. Reeve, if he ever had any, must have been formed after his marriage, as a reference to statutes will shew, so that the supposed scandal, as it has been transmitted to us, involves its own refutation.

A. Bell. Life of Dryden, i. 91. Ed. 1854.

The Kings of Spain are supposed to be the two Brothers, the Young and the Elder (see note at p. 383.). — Key 1704.
Enter Bayes, Johnson and Smith.

Bayes. Come, come in, Gentlemen. 'Y'are very welcome Mr.—a—Ha' you your Part ready?

1 Play. Yes, Sir.

Bayes. But do you understand the true humour of it?

1 Play. I, Sir, pretty well.

Bayes. And Amarillis, how does she do? Does not her Armor become her?

3 Play. O, admirably!

Bayes. I'll tell you, now, a pretty conceit. What do you think I'll make 'em call her anon, in this Play?

Smi. What, I pray?

Bayes. Why I'll make 'em call her Armarringis, because of her Armor: ha, ha, ha.

Johns. That will be very well, indeed.

Bayes. I, it's a pretty little rogue; she is my Missy. I knew her face would set off Armor extremly: and, to tell you true, I writ that Part only for her. Well, Gentlemen, I dare be bold to say, without vanity, I'll shew you something, here, that's very ridiculous, I gad.

[Exeunt Players.

Johns. Sir, that we do not doubt of.

Bayes. Pray, Sir, let's fit down. Look you, Sir, the chief hindge of this Play, upon which the whole Plot moves and turns, and that causeth the variety of all the several accidents, which, you know, are the thing in Nature that make up the grand refinement of a Play, is, that I suppose two Kings to be of the same place: as, for example, at Brentford; for I love to write familiarly. Now the people having the same relations to 'em both, the same affections, the same duty, the same obedience, and all that; are divided among themselves in point of devoir and interest, how to behave themselves equally between 'em: these Kings differing sometimes in particular; though, in the main, they agree. (I know not whether I make my self well understood.)
BIBLIOGRAPHY.—KEYS TO THE REHEARSAL.

Continued from page 32.

1. To give the reader an account of the writer of this farce.
2. The motives which induced him to compose it.

I can stay no longer now, said he; but if you desire any further direction in this matter, meet me here to-morrow night, and I will discourse more particularly on those two heads, and then take my leave of you: wishing you good success with your preface, and that your Key may prove a Golden one.

Now, kind reader, having received all the instructions I could gain from my resolute spark at our several meetings, I must stand on my own legs, and turn Prefacer, tho' against my will. And thus I set out,

1. To tell thee what all persons, who are anything acquainted with the stage, know already: viz. That this farce was wrote by the most noble George Villiers, late Duke of Buckingham, &c. a person of a great deal of natural wit and ingenuity, and of excellent judgement, particularly in matters of this nature: his forward genius was improved by a liberal education, and the conversation of the greatest persons in his time; and all these cultivated and improved by study and travel.

By the former, he became well acquainted with the writings of the most celebrated Poets of the late age; viz. Shakespear, Beaumont, and Johnson, (the last of whom he knew personally, being thirteen years old when he died) also with the famous company of actors at Black-Fryars, whom he always admired.

He was likewise very intimate with the poets of his time; as Sir John Denham, Sir John Suckling, the Lord Falkland, Mr. Sidney Godolphin, (a near relation to the Lord High Treasurer of England that now is, the glory of that ancient family) Mr. Waller, and Mr. Cowley; on the last of whom he bestowed a genteel Annuity during his life, and a noble monument in Westminster-Abbey after his decease.

By travel he had the opportunity of observing the deconum of foreign theatres; especially the French, under the regulation of Monsieur Corneille, before it was so far Italianated, and over-run with opera and farce, as now it is; and before the venom thereof had crossed the narrow seas, and poisoned the English stage: We being naturally prone to imitate the French in their fashions, manners, and customs, let them be never so vicious, fantastick, or ridiculous.

By what has been said on this head, I hope thou art fully satisfied who was the author of this piece, which the learned and judicious Dr. Burnet (Now Bishop of Sarum) calls 'a correction,' and 'an unmerciful exposing'; and I believe thou hast as little cause to doubt of his being able to perform it.

Had this great person been endued with constancy and steadiness of mind, equal to his other abilities both natural and acquired, he had been the most complete gentleman in his time.

I shall proceed to shew,

2. The motives which induced him to undertake it.

The civil war silenced the stage for almost twenty years, tho' not near so severely then, as it is since grown; and it had been happy for England, if this had been the worst effect of that war. The many changes of government, that succeeded the dissolution of the ancient constitution, made the people very uneasy, and unanimously desirous of its restitution; which was effected by a free Parliament, in the year 1660.

This sudden revolution, which is best known by the name of The Restoration, brought with it many ill customs, from the several countries, to which the King and the cavaliers were retired, during their exile, which proved very pernicious to our English constitution, by corrupting our morals; and to which the reviving the stage, and bringing women out, and encouraging and applauding the many lewd, senseless, and unnatural plays, that ensued upon this great change, did very much contribute.

* This is a mistake. The Duke of Buckingham was born Jan. 30, 1627. Ben Johnson died Aug. 6, 1637. Ep. Percy.

Continued at page 46.
JOHNS. I did not observe you, Sir: pray say that again.

BAYES. Why, look you, Sir, (nay, I beseech you, be a little curious in taking notice of this, or else you'll never understand my notion of the thing) the people being embarra.sst by their equal tyès to both, and the Soveraigns concern'd in a reciprocal regard, as well to their own interest, as the good of the people; may make a certain kind of a—-you understand me—upon which, there does arise several disputes, tumults, heart-burnings, and all that—-In fine, you'll apprehend it better when you fee it.

[Exit, to call the Players.

SML. I find the Author will be very much oblig'd to the Players, if they can make any fence of this.

Enter BAYES.

BAYES. Now, Gentlemen, I would fain ask your opinion of one thing. I have made a Prologue and an Epilogue, which may both serve for either: (do you mark?) nay, they may both serve too, I gad, for any other Play as well as this.

SML. Very well. That's, indeed, Artificial.

BAYES. And I would fain ask your judgements, now, which of them would do best for the Prologue? For, you must know, there is, in nature, but two ways of making very good Prologues. The one is by civility, by infinuation, good language, and all that, to—-a—-in a manner, steal your plaudit from the courtesie of the Auditors: the other, by making use of some certain personal things, which may keep a hawk upon such cenfuring persons, as cannot otherways, A gad, in nature, be hindred from being too free with their tongues. To which end, my first Prologue is, that I come out in a long black Veil, and a great huge Hang-man behind me, with a Furr'd cap, and his Sword drawn; and there tell 'em plainly, That if, out of good nature, they will not like my Play, why I gad,
There were printed Papers given the Audience before the Acting of the Indian Emperor, telling them, that it was the sequel of the Indian Queen, Part of which Play was written by Mr. Bayes, &c. Key 1704.

The text of these papers is prefixed to the Play. It runs thus.

THE Conclusion of the Indian Emperor, to the Indian Queen.

The Conclusion of the Indian Queen, (part of which Poem was writ by me) left little matter for another Story to be built on, there remaining but two of the considerable Characters alive, (viz.) Montezuma and Orasia; thereupon the Author of this, thought it necessary to produce new Persons from the old ones; and considering the late Indian Queen, before the lov’d Montezuma, liv’d in clandestine Marriage with her General Traxalla; from those two, he has rais’d a Son and two Daughters, supposed to be left young Orphans at their Death: On the other side, he has given to Montezuma and Orasia, two Sons and a Daughter; all now supposed to be grown up to Mens and Women’s Estate; and their Mother Orasia (for whom there was no further use in the story) lately dead.

So that you are to imagine about Twenty years elapsed since the Coronation of Montezuma; who, in the Truth of the History, was a great and glorious Prince; and in whose time happened the Discovery and Invasion of Mexico by the Spaniards; under the conduct of Hernando Cortes, who, joining with the Taxallan-Indians, the inveterate Enemies of Montezuma, wholly Subverted that flourishing Empire; the Conquest of which, is the Subject of this Dramatique Poem.

I have neither wholly followed the story nor varied from it; and, as near as I could, have traced the Native simplicity and ignorance of the Indians, in relation to European Customs: The Shipping, Armour, Horses, Swords, and Guns of the Spaniards, being as new to them as their Habits, and their Language.

The difference of their Religion from ours, I have taken from the Story itself; and that which you find of it in the first and fifth Acts, touching the sufferings and constancy of Montezuma in his Opinions, I have only illustrated, not altered from those who have written of it.

"Perfons, egad, I vow to gad, and all that" is the constant style of Failor, in the Wild Gallant; for which take this short speech, instead of many. Key 1704.

Failor. Really Madam, I look upon you as a person of such worth and all that, that I vow to gad I honour you of all persons in the World; and though I am a person that am inconsiderable in the World, and all that Madam, yet for a person of your worth and excellency, I would——

I'll e'en kneel down, and he shall cut my head off.
Whereupon they all clapping——a——

SM. But, suppose they do not.

BAYES. Suppose! Sir, you may suppose what you please, I have nothing to do with your suppose, Sir, nor am not at all mortifi'd at it; not at all, Sir; I gad, not one jot. Suppose quoth a!—— [Walks away.]

JOHNS. Phoo! pr'ythee, Bayes, don't mind what he says: he's a fellow newly come out of the Country, he knows nothing of what's the relish, here, of the Town.

BAYES. If I writ, Sir, to please the Country, I should have follow'd the old plain way; but I write for some persons of Quality, and peculiar friends of mine, that understand what Flame and Power in writing is: and they do me the right, Sir, to approve of what I do.

JOHNS. I, I, they will clap, I warrant you; never fear it.

BAYES. I'm sure the design's good; that cannot be deny'd. And then, for language, I gad, I defe'em all, in nature, to mend it. Besides, Sir, I have printed above a hundred sheets of papyr, to insinuate the Plot into the Boxes;¹ and withal, have appointed two or three dozen of my friends, to be readie in the Pit, who, I'm sure, will clap, and so the rest, you know, must follow; and then pray, Sir, what becomes of your suppose? ha, ha, ha.

JOHNS. Nay, if the business be so well laid, it cannot BAYES. I think so, Sir; and therefore would chuse this for the Prologue. For (if I could engage 'em to clap, before they see the Play,) you know 'twould be so much the better; because then they were engag'd: for, let a man write never so well, there are, now-a-days, a sort of persons,² they call Critiques, that, I gad, have no more wit in 'em than so many Hobby-horſes; but they'll laugh you, Sir, and find fault, and cenſure things that, A gad, I'm sure they are not able to do themselves. A sort of envious persons, that emulate the glories of persons of parts, and think to build their

(a) He contracted with the King's Company of Actors, in the Year 1668, for a whole Share, to write them four Plays a Year. Key 1704.

(b) E. Malone, Life of Dryden, p. 72-74, Ed. 1800, adduces evidence to show that the number of plays was three a year, for which Dryden received 1½ share in the King's Company, equal to about £300 or £400 a year.
fame, by calumniating of persons that, I gad, to my knowledge, of all persons in the world are, in nature, the persons that do as much despise all that, as——

JOHNS. I, I, you have said enough of 'em in conscience: I'm sure more than they'll ever be able to answer.

BAYES. Why, I'll tell you, Sir, sincerely, and bona fide; were it not for the sake of some ingenious persons, and choice female spirits, that have a value for me, I would see 'em all hang'd before I would e'er more set pen to papyrus; but let 'em live in ignorance like ingrates.

JOHNS. I marry! that were a way to be reveng'd of 'em indeed: and, if I were in your place, now, I would do it.

BAYES. No, Sir; there are certain eyes upon me, that I cannot be disingag'd from; otherwise, I would. But pray, Sir, how do you like my hangman?

SMI. By my troth, Sir, I should like him very well.

BAYES. I, but how do you like it? (for I see you can judge) Would you have it for the Prologue, or the Epilogue?

JOHNS. Faith, Sir, it's so good, let it e'en serve for both.

BAYES. No, no; that won't do. Besides, I have made another.

JOHNS. What other, Sir?

BAYES. Why, Sir, my other is Thunder and Lightning.

JOHNS. That's greater: I'd rather fllick to that.

BAYES. Do you think so? I'll tell you then; though there have been many witty Prologues written of late, yet I think you'll say this is a non pareillo: I'm sure nobody has hit upon it yet. For here, Sir, I make my Prologue to be Dialogue: and as, in my first, you see I strive to oblige the Auditors by civility, by good nature, and all that; so, in this, by the other way, in 'Almah. So, two kind Turtles, when a Storm is nigh
Look up, and see it gath'ring in the Skie.
Each calls his Mate to shelter in the Groves,
Leaving, in murmures, their unfinish'd Loves.
Perch'd on some dropping Branch they sit alone,
And Cooe, and hearken to each others moan.

ii., p. 82. Ed. 1672.

'Song in Dialogue.

Evening. I am an Evening dark as Night,
Jack. Whither, whither, whither! [Within.
Evening. Hither, hither, hither.
Jack. Thou art some prattling Echo, of my making.
Evening. Thou art a Foolish Fire, by thy mistaking.
I am the Evening that creates thee.

Enter Jack in a black Suit border'd with Glow-worms, a Coronet of Shaded Beams on his head, over it a Paper Lantern with a Candle in't.
Terrorem, I chuse for the persons Thunder and Lightning. Do you apprehend the conceit?

Johns. Phoo, pox! then you have it cocksure. They'll be hang'd, before they'd dare affront an Author, that has 'em at that lock.

Bayes. I have made, too, one of the most delicate, daintie Simile's in the whole world, I gad, if I knew but how to applie it.

Smi. Let's hear it, I pray you.

Bayes. 'Tis an allusion to love.

1 So Boar and Sow, when any storm is nigh,
   Snuff up, and smell it gathering in the Skie:
   Boar beckons Sow to trot in Cheesnut Groves,
   And there consummate their unfinish'd Loves.
   Pensive in mud they wallow all alone,
   And snort, and grumble to each others moan.

How do you like it now, ha?

Johns. Faith, 'tis extraordinary fine: and very applicable to Thunder and Lightning, methinks, because it speaks of a Storm.

Bayes. I gad, and so it does, now I think on't. Mr. Johnson, I thank you: and I'll put it in profeso. Come out, Thunder and Lightning.

2 Enter Thunder and Lightning.

Thun. I am the bold Thunder.

Bayes. Mr. Cartwright, pr'ythee speak a little louder, and with a hoarser voice. I am the bold Thunder! Phaw! speake it me in a voice that thunders it out indeed: I am the bold Thunder.

Thun. I am the bold Thunder.

Light. The brisk Lightning, I.

Bayes. Nay you must be quick and nimble.
The brisk Lightning, I. That's my meaning.

Thun. I am the bravest Hector of the Skie.

Light. And I, fair Helen, that made Hector die.
Jack. *My Lantern and my Candle waits thee.
Evening. *Those Flajolets that we heard play,
Are Reapers who have left their way;
They Play, they Sing, they Dance a-Round,
Lead them up; here's Faery-ground.

Chorus.

Let the Men ware the Ditches;
Maids, look to your Breeches, we'll scratch them with Briars and Thistles:
when the Flajolets cry,
we are a-dry;
Pond-water shall wet their whistles.

1 Abraham Ivory had formerly been a considerable Actor of Womens Parts; but afterwards stupify'd himself so far, with drinking strong Waters, that, before the first Acting of this Farce, he was fit for nothing, but to go of Errands; for which, and meer Charity, the Company allow'd him a Weekly Sallary. • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • Key 1704.
Thun. I strike men down.
Light. I fire the Town.
Thun. Let the Critiques take heed how they grumble,
    For then begin I for to rumble.
Light. Let the Ladies allow us their graces,
    Or I'll blast all the paint on their faces,
    And dry up their Peter to foot.
Thun. Let the Critiques look to't.
Light. Let the Ladies look to't.
Thun. For Thunder will do't.
Light. For Lightning will shoot.
Thun. I'll give you dash for dash.
Light. I'll give you flash for flash.
    Gallants, I'll finge your Feather.
Thun. I'll Thunder you together.
Both. Look to't, look to't; we'll do't, we'll do't: look to't, we'll do't.          [Twice or thrice repeated.
    [Exeunt ambo.]
Bayes. That's all. 'Tis but a flash of a Prologue:
a Droll.
Smi. 'Tis short, indeed; but very terrible.
Bayes. Ay, when the simile is in, it will do to a Miracle, I gad. Come, come; begin the Play.

    Enter first Player.

1 Play. Sir, Mr. Ivory is not come yet; but he'll be here presently, he's but two doors off.
Bayes. Come then, Gentlemen, let's go out and take a pipe of Tobacco.          [Exeunt.

Finis Actus primi.
ILLUSTRATIONS, &c.

[SHAKSPERE. &c. Draw up our Men; and in low Whispers we think them out.]  [SHAKSPERE. &c. Draw up our Men; and in low Whispers we think them out.]

[SHAKSPERE. &c. Prince, pag. 20, 22, 29, 60, where you shall find the chief Commands, and Directions, are given in white.]  [SHAKSPERE. &c. Prince, pag. 20, 22, 29, 60, where you shall find the chief Commands, and Directions, are given in white.]

We are now able to see a Copy of the first of these Plays, by the kind permission of the Author's Executors.

[SHAKSPERE. &c. I know not under what Species to place the Plays; consisting of several Pieces of different Kinds handwritten, and put together, several of which the Author writ in the time of Queen Elizabeth, and were acted separately by stealth; as the Drama of St. Francis of Paule exprest by Instrumental, and Vocal Musick, and by Art of Perspective in Scenes, &c. The Cruelty of the Spaniards in Peru. These two Pieces were first printed in quarto. They make the third and fourth Acts of this Play.
The second Act consists of a French Farce, translated from Molière's Scapinelle, on Le Cocus Imaginaire, and purposely by our Author put into a form of Jargon common to French-men newly come over. The fifth Act consists of Tragedie travesie, or the Actions of Cæsar Antony and Cleopatra in Verie Burleique. This Farce I have seen acted at the Theatre in Dorset-garden some Years ago, at the end of that excellent Tragedy of Pompey, translated by the incomparable Pen of the much

BIBLIOGRAPHY. KEYS TO 'THE REHEARSAL.'

Continued from page 36.

Then appear'd such plays as these: The Siege of Rhodes, Part I. acted at the Cock-pit, before the Restoration; The Play-House to be Lett; The Slighted Maid; The United Kingdoms; The Wild Gallant; The English Monsieur; The Villain; and the like.

You will meet with several passages out of all these, except the United Kingdoms, (which was never printed) in the following notes; as you will out of several other plays, which are here omitted.

Our most noble author, to manifest his just indignation and hatred of this foulsome new way of writing, used his utmost interest and endeavours to stifle it at its first appearing on the stage, by engaging all his friends to explode, and run down these plays, especially the United Kingdoms; which had like to have brought his life into danger.

The author of it being nobly born, of an ancient and numerous family, had many of his relations and friends in the Cock-pit, during the acting it; some of them perceiving his Grace to head a party, who were very active in dam-ing the play, by hissing and laughing immoderately at the strange conduct thereof, there were persons laid in wait for him as he came out: but there being a great tumult and uproar in the house and the passages near it, he escaped: But he was threaten'd hard: however the business was compoused in a short time, tho' by what means I have not been informed.

Concluded at page 48.
ACTUS II. SCÆNA I.

BAYES, JOHNSON and SMITH.

BAYES. O, Sir, because I’l do nothing here that ever was done before— [Spits, SMI. A very notable design, for a Play, indeed.

BAYES. Instead of beginning with a Scene that discovers something of the Plot, I begin this with a whisper.¹

SMI. That’s very new.

BAYES. Come, take your seats. Begin Sirs.

Enter Gentlemen-Usher and Physician.

Phys. Sir, by your habit, I should guess you to be the Gentleman-Usher of this sumptuous place.

Ush. And, by your gait and fashion, I should almost suspect you rule the healths of both our noble Kings, under the notion of Physician.

Phys. You hit my Function right.

Ush. And you, mine.

Phys. Then let’s imbrace.

Ush. Come then.

Phys. Come.

JOHNS. Pray, Sir, who are these two so very civil persons?

BAYES. Why, Sir, the Gentleman-Usher, and Physicians of the two Kings of Brentford.

JOHNS. But how comes it to pafs, then, that they know one another no better?

BAYES. Phoo! that’s for the better carrying on of the Intrigue.

JOHNS. Very well.
After this, our author endeavoured by writing to expose the follies of these new-fashioned plays in their proper colours, and to set them in so clear a light, that the people might be able to discover what trash it was, of which they were so fond, as he plainly hints in the prologue; and so set himself to the composing of this farce.

When his Grace began it, I could never learn, nor is it very material.

Thus much we may certainly gather from the editions of the plays reflected on in it, that it was before the end of 1663, and finished before the end of 1664; because it had been several times rehears'd, the players were perfect in their parts, and all things in readiness for its acting, before the great plague 1665; and that then prevented it.

But what was so ready for the stage, and so near being acted at the breaking out of that terrible sickness, was very different from what you have since seen in print. In that he called his poet Bilboa; by which name, the town generally understood Sir Robert Howard to be the Person pointed at.* Besides, there were very few of this new sort of plays then extant, except these before mentioned, at that time; and more, than were in being, could not be ridiculed.

The acting of this farce being thus hindered, it was laid by for several years, and came not on the public theatre, till the year 1674.

During this interval, many great plays came forth, written in heroic rhyme; and, on the death of Sir William D'Avenant, 1669, Mr. Dryden, a new laureat appeared on the stage, much admired, and highly applauded; which moved the Duke to change the name of his poet from Bilboa to Bayes, whose works you will find often mentioned in the following Key.

Thus far, kind reader, I have followed the direction of my new acquaintance, to the utmost extent of my memory, without transgressing the bounds he assigned me, and I am free from any fear of having displeased him; I wish I could justly say as much, with relation to the offences I have committed against yourself, and all judicious persons who shall peruse this poor address.

I have nothing to say in my own defence: I plead guilty, and throw myself at your feet, and beg for mercy; and not without hope, since what I have here writ did not proceed from the least malice in me, to any person or family in the world; but from an honest design to enable the meanest readers to understand all the passages of this farce, that it may sell the better. I am, with all submission, Your most obliged, humble Servant.

5. A real Key should confine itself to the identical plays and dramatists satirized, nothing more or less. Bp. Percy searching through all the antecedent dramatic literature, may find, did find many parallel passages, but he could adduce nothing to prove these were in the minds of the authors in writing The Rehearsal. Indeed it is improbable that they had in view the 40 or 50 plays to which he refers. His references but illustrate the extent of the mock heroic drama.

In the Illustrations of the present work Langbaine and the first Key have been principally followed; it being noted that the Text is, as first acted on 7 Dec. 1671. Subsequent additions and their illustrations therefore, (such as ridicule Dryden's The Asignment, or Love in a Nunnery, produced in 1672) are, with two exceptions, not found in it. At the same time, the vacant spaces on the alternate pages will enable enquirers to note the results of further researches.

* Very small signs appear of this at present: But when the Duke altered the name, he might also suppress the more offensive passages. Before the Rehearsal was acted Sir Robert Howard was upon such good terms with our noble author, that he dedicated to him his Duel of the Stags, Lond. 1688, 8vo. Bp. Percy.

† Mr. Dryden became Poet-laureat upon the Death of Sir William Davenant; but he had appeared as a Dramatic Writer before. Bp. Percy.
Phys. Sir, to conclude,

Smi. What, before he begins?
Bayes. No, Sir; you must know they had been talking of this a pretty while without.
Smi. Where? In the Tyring-room?
Bayes. Why ay, Sir. He’s so dull! Come, speak again.

Phys. Sir, to conclude, the place you fill, has more than amply exacted the Talents of a wary Pilot, and all these threatening storms which, like impregnant Clouds, do hover o’er our heads, (when they once are grasp’d but by the eye of reason) melt into fruitful showers of blessings on the people.

Bayes. Pray mark that Allegory. Is not that good?
Johns. Yes; that grasping of a storm with the eye is admirable.

Phys. But yet some rumours great are stirring; and if Lorenzo should prove false, (as none but the great Gods can tell) you then perhaps would find, that—

[Whispers.

Bayes. Now they whisper.
Uff. Alone, do you say?
Phys. No; attended with the noble—
[Whispers.
Uff. Who, he in gray?
Phys. Yes; and at the head of—[Whispers.
Bayes. Pray mark.
Uff. Then, Sir, most certain, ’twill in time appear
These are the reasons that induc’d ’em to’t:
First, he—
[Whispers.
Bayes. Now t’other whispers.
Uff. Secondly, they—
[Whispers.
Bayes. He’s at it still.
Uff. Thirdly, and lastly, both he, and they—[Whispers.
Bayes. There they both whisper. [Exeunt Whispering.

Now, Gentlemen, pray tell me true, and without flattery, is not this a very odd beginning of a Play?

Johns. In troth, I think it is, Sir. But why two Kings of the same place?

Bayes. Why? because it's new; and that's it I aim at. I despise your Johnson, and Beaumont, that borrow'd all they writ from Nature: I am for fetching it purely out of my own fancie, I.

Smi. But what think you of Sir John Suckling, Sir?

Bayes. By gad, I am a better Poet than he.

Smi. Well, Sir; but pray why all this whispering?

Bayes. Why, Sir, (besides that it is new, as I told you before) because they are suppos'd to be Politicians; and matters of State ought not to be divulg'd.

Smi. But then, Sir, why—

Bayes. Sir, if you'll but repulse your curiosity till the end of the fifth Act, you'll find it a piece of patience not ill recompen'd. [Goes to the door.

Johns. How doft thou like this, Frank? Is it not just as I told thee?

Smi. Why, I did never, before this, see any thing in Nature, and all that, (as Mr. Bayes says) so foolish, but I could give some ghefs at what mov'd the Fop to do it; but this, I confess, does go beyond my reach.

Johns. Why, 'tis all alike: Mr. Winterhull has inform'd me of this Play before. And I'll tell thee, Frank, thou shalt not see one Scene here, that either properly ought to come in, or is like any thing thou canst imagine has ever been the practice of the World. And then, when he comes to what he calls good language, it is, as I told thee, very fantastical, most abominably dull, and not one word to the purpose.

Smi. It does surprize me, I am sure, very much.

Johns. I, but it won't do so long: by that time thou haft seen a Play or two, that I'll shew thee, thou wilt be pretty well acquainted with this new kind of Popery.
SCÆNA II.

Enter the two Kings, hand in hand.

BAYES. Here are the two Kings of Brentford; take notice of their file: ‘twas never yet upon the Stage; but, if you like it, I could make a shift, perhaps, to shew you a whole Play, written all just so.

1 King. Did you observe their whisper, brother King?
2 King. I did; and heard besides a grave Bird sing That they intend, sweet-heart, to play us pranks.

BAYES. This, now, is familiar, because they are both persons of the fame Qualitie.

Smt. ‘Sdeath, this would make a man spew.

1 King. If that design appears, I'll lug 'em by the ears Until I make 'em crack.
2 King. And so will I, ifack.

1 King. You must begin, Mon foy.
2 King. Sweet Sir, Pardonnez moy.

BAYES. Mark that: I Makes 'em both speak French, to shew their breeding.

JOHNS. O, ’tis extraordinary fine.

2 King. Then, spite of Fate, we'll thus combined stand; And, like true brothers, walk still hand in hand, [Execut Reges.

JOHNS. This is a very Majestick Scene indeed.

BAYES. Ay, ’tis a cruff, a lafting cruff for your Rogue Critiques, I gad: I would fain fee the proudest of 'em all but dare to nibble at this; I gad, if they do, this shall rub their gums for 'em, I promife you. It was I, you must know, writ the Play I told you of, in this very Stile: and shall I tell you a very good jest? I gad, the Players would not act it: ha, ha, ha.
1 See note on p. 54.

2 This rule is most exactly observed in Dryden's Indian Emperor, Act iv. Scene iv. Upon a sudden and unexpected misfortune, Almeria thus expresses her surprise and concern.

 Алм. All hopes of safety and of love are gone:
 As when some dreadful Thunder-clap is nigh,
 The winged Fire shoots swiftly through the Skie,
 Strikes and Confuses e're scarce it does appear,
 And by the sudden ill, prevents the fear:
 Such is my state in this amazing wo;
 It leaves no pow'r to think, much less to do:

 J. DRYDEN. The Indian Emperour, p. 50. Ed. 1667.

3 Boabdel to Almahide.

As some fair tulip, by a storm opprest,
Shrinks up, and folds its silken arms to rest;
And, bending to the blast, all pale and dead,
Hears from within, the wind ting round its head:
So, throwded up your beauty disappears;
Unvail my Love; and lay aside your fears.

Ed. 1672.
Bayes. Blazing Comet! mark that. I gad, very fir.e.

Pret. But I am so surpris'd with sleep, I cannot speak the refl. [sleeps.

Bayes. Does not that, now, surprize you, to fall asleep just in the nick? His spirits exhale with the heat of his passion, and all that, and wop falls asleep, as you see. Now, here, she must make a fimile.

Smi. Where's the necessity of that, Mr. Bayes?

Bayes. Because she's surpris'd. That's a general Rule: you must ever make a fimile when you are surpris'd; 'tis the new way of writing.

Cloris. As some tall Pine, which we, on Ætna, find T'have flood the rage of many a boy'st'rous wind,
Feeling without, that flames within do play,
Which would consume his Root and Sap away;
He spreads his worsted Arms unto the Skies,
Silently grieves, all pale, repines and dies:
So, shrowded up, your bright eye disappears.
Break forth, bright scorching Sun, and dry my tears.

[Exit.

Bayes. I am afraid, Gentlemen, this Scene has made you sad; for I must confess, when I writ it, I wept my self.

Smi. No, truly, Sir, my spirits are almost exhali'd too, and I am likelier to fall asleep.

Prince Pretty-man starts up, and says—

Pret. It is resolv'd. [Exit.

Smi. Mr. Bayes, may one be so bold as to ask you a question, now, and you not be angry?

Bayes. O Lord, Sir, you may ask me what you please. I vow to gad, you do me a great deal of honour; you do not know me, if you say that, Sir.

Smi. Then, pray, Sir, what is it that this Prince here has resolv'd in his sleep?

Bayes. Why, I must confess, that question is well enough ask'd, for one that is not acquainted with this
ILLUSTRATIONS, &c.
new way of writing. But you must know, Sir, that, to outdo all my fellow-Writers, whereas they keep their Intrigo secret till the very last Scene before the Dance; I now, Sir, do you mark me—

Sir. Begin the Play, and end it, without ever opening the Plot at all?
Bayes. I do so; that's the very plain truth on't: ha, ha, ha; I do, I gad. If they cannot find it out themselves, e'en let 'em alone for Bayes, I warrant you. But here, now, is a Scene of business: pray observe it; for I dare say you'll think it no unwise discourse this, nor ill argu'd. To tell you true, 'tis a Debate I over-heard once betwixt two grand, sober, governing persons.

SCÆNA IV.

Enter Gentleman-Usher and Physician.

Ush. Ome, Sir; let's state the matter of fact, and lay our heads together.
Phys. Right: lay our heads together. I love to be merry sometimes; but when a knotty point comes, I lay my head close to it, with a pipe of Tobacco in my mouth, and then I whew it away, a'faith.
Bayes. I do just so, I gad, always.

Ush. The grand question is, whether they heard us whisper? which I divide thus: into when they heard, what they heard, and whether they heard or no.
Johns. Most admirably divided, I swear.

Ush. As to the when; you say just now: so that is answer'd. Then, for what; why, what answers it self: for what could they hear, but what we talk'd of? So that, naturally, and of necessity, we come to the last question, Videlicet, whether they heard or no?
Sir. This is a very wise Scene, Mr. Bayes.
1 Such easy Turns of State are frequent in our Modern Plays; where we see Princes Dethron'd and Governments Chang'd, by very feeble Means, and on slight Occasions: Particularly, in Marriage-a-la-Mode; a Play, writ since the first Publication of this Farce. Where (to pass by the Dulness of the State-part, the Obscurity of the Comic, the near Resemblance Leonidas bears to our Prince Pretty-Man, being sometimes a King's Son, sometimes a Shepherd's; and not to question how Amalthea comes to be a Princess, her Brother, the King's great Favourite, being (but a Lord) 'tis worth our While to observe, how easily the Fierce and Jealous Usher is Depos'd, and the Right Heir plac'd on the Throne; as it is thus related by the said Imaginary Princes.

Enter Amalthea, running.

Amal. Oh, Gentlemen, if you have Loyalty,

*Or Courage, shew it now: Leonidas

Broke on the sudden from his Guards, and snatching

A Sword from one, his back against the Scaffold,

Bravely defends himself; and owns aloud

He is our long lost King, found for this moment

But, if your Valours help not, loft for ever.

Two of his Guards, mov'd by the sense of Virtue,

Are turn'd for him, and there they stand at Bay

Against a Hoft of Foes——

This shews Mr. Bayes to be a Man of Constancy, and firm to his Resolution, and not to be laugh'd out of his own Method: Agreeable to what he says in the next Act. As long as I know my Things are Good, what care I what they say? . . . Key 1704.

* p. 71.

2 (a) Ornasdes. I know not what to say, nor what to think!

I know not when I sleep, or when I wake.

Sir W. KILLIGREW. Ornasdes, or Love and Friendship.

(b) Pandora. My doubts and fears, my reason does dismay,

I know not what to do nor what to say;

Sir W. KILLIGREW. Pandora, or The Converts.

ACT. II. SC. IV.  THE REHEARSAL.

BAYES. Yes; you have it right: they are both Polititians. I writ this Scene for a pattern, to shew the world how men should talk of business.

JOHNS. You have done it exceedingly well, indeed.

BAYES. Yes, I think this will do.

Phys. Well, if they heard us whisper, they'll turn us out, and no bodie else will take us.

Uff. No bodie else will take us.

SMI. Not for Polititians, I dare answer for it.

Phys. Let's then no more our selves invain bemoan: We are not safe until we them unthrone.

Uff. 'Tis right: And, since occasion now seems debonair, I'll seize on this, and you shall take that chair.

\[They draw their Swords, and sit down in the two great chairs upon the Stage.\]

BAYES. There's now an odd surprize; the whole State's turn'd quite topsi-turvy, without any purther or stir in the whole world, I gad.

JOHNS. A very silent change of Government, truly, as ever I heard of.

BAYES. It is so. And yet you shall see me bring 'em in again, by and by, in as odd a way every jot.

[The Ufurpers march out flourishing their swords.

Enter Shirley.

Shir. Hey ho, hey ho: what a change is here! Hey day, hey day! I know not what to do, nor what to say.\[Exit.\]

SMI. But pray, Sir, how came they to depose the Kings so easily?

BAYES. Why, Sir, you must know, they long had a design to do it before; but never could put it in practice till now: and, to tell you true, that's one reason why I made 'em whisper so at first.

SMI. O, very well: now I'm fully satisfi'd.

BAYES. And then, to shew you, Sir, it was not done so very easily neither; in this next Scene you shall see some fighting.

Smi. O, ho: so then you make the struggle to be after the busines is done?
Bayes. Aye.
Smi. O, I conceive you: that is very natural.

SCÆNA V.

Enter four men at one door, and four at another, with their swords drawn.

1 Soldier. Who goes there?
2 Sol. A friend.
1 Sol. What friend?
2 Sol. A friend to the House.
1 Sol. Fall on.

[They all kill one another. Musick strikes.

Bayes. Hold, hold. [To the Musick. It ceaseth.

Now here's an odd surprize: all these dead men you shall see rise up presently, at a certain Note that I have made, in Effaut flat, and fall a Dancing. Do you hear, dead men? remember your Note in Effaut flat. Play on.

[To the Musick.

Now, now, now. | The Musick play his Note, and the dead men rise; but cannot get in order.

Out, out, out! Did ever men spoil a good thing so? no figure, no ear, no time, no thing? you dance worse than the Angels in Harry the Eight, or the fat Spirits in The Tempest, I gadd.

1 Sol. Why, Sir, 'tis impossible to do anything in time, to this Tune.

Bayes. O Lord, O Lord! impossible? why, Gentlemen, if there be any faith in a person that's a Christian, I sate up two whole nights in composing this Air, and apting it for the busines: for, if you observe, there are two several Designs in this Tune; it begins swift, and ends slow. You talk of time, and time; you shall see me do't. Look you now. Here I am dead.

[LIes down flat on his face.
Now mark my Note in Effaut flat. Strike up Musick.
Now.

| As he rises up hastily, he tumbles and falls down again.

Ah, gadsookers, I have broke my Nose.]

JOHNS. By my troth, Mr. Bayes, this is a very unfortunate Note of yours, in Effaut flat.

BAYES. A plague of this damn'd Stage, with your nails, and your tenter-hooks, that a man cannot come to teach you to Act, but he must break his nose, and his face, and the divel and all. Pray, Sir, can you help me to a wet piece of brown papyr?

SMi. No indeed, Sir; I don't usuallly carry any about me.

2 Sol. Sir, I'll go get you some within presently.

BAYES. Go, go then; I'll follow you. Pray dance out the Dance, and I'll be with you in a moment.
Remember you four that you dance like Horfemen.

[Exit BAYES.

They dance the Dance, but can make nothing of it.

1 Sol. A Devil! let's try this no more: play my Dance that Mr. Bayes found fault with.

[Dance, and Extunt.

SMi. What can this fool be doing all this while about his nose?

JOHNS. Prythee let's go see.

[Extunt.

Finis Actus secundi.
"Failer and Bibber his Taylor in The Wilt Gellant. Kop, 1724."
ACTUS III. SCAENA I.

Bayes with a papyr on his Nose, and the two Gentlemen.

Bayes. Now, Sir, this I do, because my fancie in this Play is to end every Act with a Dance.

Smt. Faith, that fancie is very good, but I should hardly have broke my nose for it, though.

Johns. That fancie, I supposse, is new too.

Bayes. Sir, all my fancies are so. I tread upon no man's heels; but make my flight upon my own wings, I assure you. As, now, this next Scene some perhaps will say, It is not very necessarry to the Plot; I grant it; what then? I meant it so. But then it's as full of Drollery as ever it can hold: 'tis like an Orange stuck with Cloves, as for conceipt. Come, where are you? This Scene will make you die with laughing, if it be well acted: it is a Scene of sheer Wit, without any mixture in the world, I gad. [Reads—

Enter Prince Pretty-man, and Tom Thimble his Taylor.

This, Sirs, might properly enough be call'd a prize of Wit; for you shall see 'em come in upon one another snip snap, hit for hit, as fast as can be. First one speaks, then presently 'other's upon him flap, with a Repartee; then he at him again, dash with a new conceipt: and so eternally, eternally, I gad, till they go quite off the Stage. [Goes to call the Players.

Smt. What a plague, does this Fop mean by his snip snap, hit for hit, and dash?

Johns. Mean? why, he never meant any thing in's life: what do't talk of meaning for?
"Nay, if that be all, there's no such haft: the Courtiers are not so forward to pay their Debts.

"Failer. Then say I:
Take a little Bibber,
And throw him in the River,
And if he will trust never,
Then there let him lie ever.

Bibber. Then say I:
Take a little Failer,
And throw him to the Jaylour;
And there let him lie
Till he has paid his Taylor.

Enter Bayes.

Bayes. Why don’t you come in?

Enter Prince Pretty-man and Tom Thimble.

Pret. But pr’ythee, Tom Thimble, why wilt thou needs marry? If nine Taylors make but one man; and one woman cannot be fatisfi’d with nine men: what work art thou cutting out here for thy self, trow we?

Bayes. Good.

Thim. Why, an’t please your Highness, if I can’t make up all the work I cut out, I shan’t want Journey-men to help me, I warrant you.

Bayes. Good again.

Pret. I am afraid thy Journey-men, though, Tom, won’t work by the day, but by the night.

Bayes. Good still.

Thim. However, if my wife fits but crofs-leg’d, as I do, there will be no great danger: not half so much as when I trufled you for your Coronation-fuit.

Bayes. Very good, ifaith.

Pret. Why, the times then liv’d upon trufl; it was the fashion. You would not be out of time, at fuch a time as that, fure: A Taylor, you know, muft never be out of fashion.

Bayes. Right.

Thim. I’m fure, Sir, I made your cloath in the Court-fashion, for you never paid me yet.¹

Bayes. There’s a bob for the Court.

Pret. Why, Tom, thou art a sharp rogue when thou art angry, I fee: thou pay’ft me now, methinks.

Thim. I, Sir, in your own coyn: you give me nothing but words.²

Bayes. Admirable, before gad.

Pret. Well, Tom, I hope shortly I shall have another coyn for thee; for now the Wars come on, I shall grow to be a man of mettal.
1 Ay, 'tis pretty well; but he does not Top his Part.
A great Word with Mr. Edward Howard. . . . Key 1704.

1 See p. 62.

6 M. Edward Howard's Words . . Key 1704. See p. 28.
ACT. III. SC. 1.  THE REHEARSAL.

BAYES. O, you did not do that half enough.

JOHNS. Methinks he does it admirably.

BAYES. I, pretty well; but he does not hit me in't:
he does not top his part.

Thim. That's the way to be stamp'd yourself, Sir.
I shall see you come home, like an Angel for the Kings-evil, with a hole bor'd through you.  [Exeunt.

BAYES. That's very good, i'faith: ha, ha, ha. Ha, there he has hit it up to the hilts, I gad. How do do you like it now, Gentlemen? Is not this pure Wit?
SMR. 'Tis snip snap, Sir, as you say; but, methinks, not pleafant, norto the purpose, for the Play does not go on.
BAYES. Play does not go on? I don't know what you mean: why, is not this part of the Play?
SMR. Yes, but the Plot stands still.
BAYES. Plot stand still! why, what a Devil is the Plot good for, but to bring in fine things?
SMR. O, I did not know that before.

BAYES. No, I think you did not: nor many things more, that I am Mafter of. Now, Sir, I gad, this is the bane of all us Writers: let us fear never so little above the common pitch, I gad, all's spoil'd; for the vulgar never understand us, they can never conceive you, Sir, the excellencie of these things.

JOHNS. 'Tis a sad fate, I must confess: but you write on still?

BAYES. Write on? I gad, I warrant you. 'Tis not their talk shall stop me: if they catch me at that lock, I'll give 'em leave to hang me. As long as I know my things to be good, what care I what they say? What, they are gone, and forgot the Song!

SMR. They have done very well, methinks, here's no need of one.

BAYES. Alack, Sir, you know nothing: you must ever interlard your Plays with Songs, Ghosts and Idols, if you mean to—a—

JOHNS. Pit, Box and Gallery, Mr. Bayes.
BAYES. I gad, Sir, and you have nick'd it. Hark you,
'Alberto. Curtius, I've something to deliver to your Ear.

Curtius. Any thing from Alberto is welcom.

Mr. Johnson, you know I don't flatter, a gad, you have a great deal of Wit.

Johns. O Lord, Sir, you do me too much honour.

Bayes. Nay, nay, come, come, Mr. Johnson, Ifacks this must not be said, amongst us that have it. I know you have wit by the judgement you make of this Play; for that's the measure I go by: my Play is my Touchstone. When a man tells me such a one is a person of parts; is he so, say I? what do I do, but bring him presently to see this Play: If he likes it, I know what to think of him; if not, your most humble Servant, Sir, I'll no more of him upon my word, I thank you. I am Clara voyant, a gad. Now here we go on to our business.

SCÆNA II.

Enter the two Usurpers, hand in hand.

Usr. But what's become of Volscius the great?
His presence has not grac'd our Court of late.

Phys. I fear some ill, from emulation sprung,
Has from us that Illustrious Hero wrung.

Bayes. Is not that Majestical?
Smi. Yes, but who a Devil is that Volscius?
Bayes. Why, that's a Prince I make in love with Parthenope.
Smi. I thank you, Sir.

Enter Cordelio.

Cor. My Leiges, news from Volscius the Prince.
Usr. His news is welcome, whatfoe'er it be.
Smi. How, Sir, do you mean that? whether it be good or bad?
Bayes. Nay, pray, Sir, have a little patience: God-fookers, you'll spoil all my Play. Why, Sir, 'tis impossible to answer every impertinent question you ask.

Smi. Cry you mercie, Sir.

Cor. His Highness Sirs, commanded me to tell you, That the fair person whom you both do know, Despairing of forgiveness for her fault, In a deep sorrow, twice she did attempt Upon her precious life; but, by the care Of Flanders-by, prevented was.

Smi. 'Sheart, what fluff's here!

Cor. At last,

Vulscius the great this dire resolve embrac'd: His servants he into the Country sent, And he himself to Piccadilly went.

Where he's inform'd, by Letters, that she's dead!

Ush. Dead! is that possible? Dead!

Phys. O ye Gods!

Bayes. There's a smart expression of a passion; O ye Gods! That's one of my bold strokes, a gad.

Smi. Yes; but who is the fair person that's dead?

Bayes. That you shall know anon.

Smi. Nay, if we know it at all, 'tis well enough.

Bayes. Perhaps you may find too, by and by, for all this, that she's not dead neither.

Smi. Marry, that's good news: I am glad of that with all my heart.

Bayes. Now, here's the man brought in that is suppos'd to have kill'd her.

[A great shout within.

Enter Amarillis with a Book in her hand and Attendants.

Ama. What 'shout Triumphant's that?

Enter a Sou'dier.

Sol. Shie maid, upon the River brink, near Twicknam Town, the assassinate is tane.

Ama. Thanks to the Powers above, for this deliverance.

Enter Pretty-man.

Phoo, Pox! you are come too late, Sir: now you may go out again, if you please. I vow to gad Mr.—a—I would not give a button for my Play, now you have done this.

Pret. What, Sir?

Bayes. What, Sir? 'Slife, Sir, you should have come out in Choler, rous upon the Stage, just as the other went off. Must a man be eternally telling you of these things? Johns. Sure this must be some very notable matter that he's so angry at.

Smi. I am not of your opinion.

Bayes. Pisch! come, let's hear your Part, Sir.

Pret. Bring in my Father, why d'ye keep him from me? Although a Fisherman, he is my Father,

Was ever Son, yet, brought to this distress,

To be, for being a Son, made fatherless?

Oh, you just Gods, rob me not of a Father.

The being of a Son take from me rather. [Exit.

Smi. Well, Ned, what think you now?

Johns. A Devil, this is worst of all. Pray, Mr.

Bayes, what's the meaning of this Scene?

Bayes. O, cry you mercy, Sir: I purport I had forgot to tell you. Why, Sir, you must know, that, long before the beginning of this Play, this Prince was taken by a Fisherman.

Smi. How, Sir, taken Prisoner?

Bayes. Taken Prisoner! O Lord, what a question's there! did ever any man ask such a question? Taken Prisoner! Godfookers, he has put the Plot quite out of my head, with this damn'd question. What was I going to say?

Johns. Nay, the Lord knows: I cannot imagine.

Bayes. Stay, let me see; taken: O 'tis true. Why, Sir, as I was going to say, his Highness here, the Prince, was taken in a Cradle by a Fisherman, and brought up as his Child.

Smi. Indeed?

Bayes. Nay, pr'ythee hold thy peace. And so, Sir, this murder being committed by the River-side, the Fisherman, upon suspicion, was feiz'd; and thereupon the Prince grew angry.

Smi. So, so; now 'tis very plain.

Johns. But, Mr. Bayes, is not that some disparagement to a Prince, to pass for a Fishermans Son? Have a care of that, I pray.

Bayes. No, no, no; not at all; for 'tis but for a while: I shall fetch him off again, presently, you shall see Enter Pretty-man and Thimble.

Pret. By all the Gods, I'll set the world on fire
Rather than let 'em ravish hence my Sire.

Thim. Brave Pretty-man, it is at length reveal'd,
That he is not thy Sire who thee conceal'd.

Bayes. Lo' you now, there he's off again.

Johns. Admirably done 'faith.

Bayes. Ay, now the Plot thickens very much upon us.

Pret. What Oracle this darkness can evince?
Sometimes a Fishers Son, sometimes a Prince.
It is a secret, great as is the world;
In which, I, like the foul, am to'sd and hurl'd.
The blackest Ink of Fate, sure, was my Lot.
And, when she writ my name, she made a blot.

[Exit.

Bayes. There's a bufl'ring verse for you now.

Smi. Yes, Sir; but pray, why is he so mightily troubled to find he is not a Fishermans Son?

Bayes. Phoo! that is not because he has a mind to be his Son, but for fear he should be thought to be nobodies Son at all.

Smi. I, that would trouble a man, indeed.

Bayes. So, let me see. Enter Prince Volscius, going out of Town.

Smi. I thought he had been gone to Piccadille.
In ridicule of Aét iv. Sc. i. of English Monsieur, by the Hon. J. Howard, of which this is a portion.

Enter Comely in a Riding Garb, with his servant.
Comely. Let my Horfes be brought ready to the door, for i'le go out of Town this Evening. [Exit servant.

Enter Welbred.

Wel. Why, how now Comely, booted and spur'd?
Comely. Marry am I.
Wel. For how long?
Comely. Why, for this seven years for ought I know, I am weary of this Town, and all that's in it, as for women I am in love with none, nor never thal, I find I have a pretty strong defence about my heart against that folly. Õ here comes the Ladies very opportunely for me.

Enter Lady VValthy and two other Ladies.

To take my leave of e'm.

L. Weal. Mr. Comely your Servant—what in a Riding Garb.
L. Weal. Why, can you ever leave this Town?
Comely. That I can truely madam, within this hour.
L. Weal. I can't believe it.

Comely. . . . . . So that for my future health i'le retire into the Countrey for Air, and there Hunt and Hawk, Eat and sleep so found, that I will never dream of a woman, or any part about her —— This resolution of mine has made me turn Poet, and therefore before I go, you shall hear a Song called my fare-well to London and women, boy sing the Song.

Of which song the third and laft stanza runs thus:—
Therefore this danger to prevent
And still to keep my hearts content:
Into the country i'le with speed,
With Hounds and Hawks my fancy feed!
Both fauer pleasures to pursuue,
Than staying to converse with you.
ACT. III. SC. II.  THE REHEARSAL.

Bayes. Yes, he gave out so; but that was onely to cover his design.
Johns. What design?
Bayes. Why, to head the Army, that lies conceal’d for him in Knights-bridge.
Johns. I see here is a great deal of Plot, Mr. Bayes.
Bayes. Yes, now it begins to break; but we shall have a world of more bufinefs anon.

1 Enter Prince Volscius, Cloris, Amarillis, and Harry with a Riding-Cloak and Boots.

2 Ama. Sir, you are cruel, thus to leave the Town,
And to retire to Country solitude.
Clo. We hop’d this Summer that we shou’d at least
Have held the honour of your company.
Bayes. Held the honour of your Company! prettily expres’d! Held the honour of your company! God-sookers, thefe fellows will never take notice of any thing.
Johns. I affure you, Sir, I admire it extreamly; I don’t know what he does.
Bayes. I, I, he’s a little envious; but ’tis no great matter. Come.

Ama. Pray let us two this fingle boon obtain,
That you will here with poor us filf remain.
Before your Horses come pronounce our fate,
For then, alas, I fear ’twill be too late.

Bayes. Sad!

Vols. Harry, my Boots; for I’ll go rage among My Blades encamp’d, and quit this Urban throng.

Smt. But pray, Mr. Bayes, is not this a little difficult, that you were saying e’en now, to keep an Army thus conceal’d in Knights-bridge.
Johns. No, not if the Inn-keepers be his friends.
Bayes. His friends! Ay, Sir, his intimate acquaintance; or else, indeed, I grant it could not be.
Smt. Yes, faith, fo it might be very easifly.
Comely sees Elsba, a Country lass, and falls suddenly in love with her.

"Comely. . . . set up my Horfes. What sudden fate hath chang'd my mind! I feel my heart so restles now as if it n'er knew rest, sure I'me in love;"

"And what's this maid's name?"

"Mustapha. I bring the Morning pictur'd in a Cloud."

"Mr. Comely in love!"

Bayes. Nay, if I do not make all things easie, I gad, I'll give you leave to hang me. Now you would think that he is going out of Town; but you shall see how prettily I have contriv'd to stop him pretently.

Smir. By my troth, Sir, you have so amaz'd me, I know not what to think.

Enter Parthenope.

Vols. Bless me! how frail are all my best resolves! How, in a moment, is my purpose chang'd! Too soon I thought my self secure from Love. Fair Madam, give me leave to ask her name Who does so gently rob me of my fame? For I should meet the Army out of Town, and, if I fail, must hazard my renown.

Par. Mother, Sir, tells Ale by the Town-walls, she her dear Parthenope she calls.

Vols. Can vulgar Vestsments high-born beauty throwd? Thou bring'st the Morning pictur'd in a Cloud?

Bayes. The Morning pictur'd in a Cloud! A, Gad-lookers, what a conceipt is there!

Par. Give you good Ev'n, Sir. [Exit.

Vols. O inauspicious Stars! that I was born To sudden love, and to more sudden scorn!

Smir. Sure, Mr. Bayes, we have loft some jest here, that they laugh at so.

Bayes. Why did you not observe? He first resolves to go out of Town, and then, as he is pulling on his Boots, falls in love. Ha, ha, ha.

Smir. O, I did not observe: that, indeed, is a very good jest.

Bayes. Here, now, you shall see a combat betwixt Love and Honour. An ancient Author has made a whole Play on't; but I have dispatch'd it all in this Scene.
May this slip be accepted as evidence that this Act stood second in the original Play?

(a) Felisbravo. Love, and Honour, pull two ways; And I stand doubtful which to take:
To Arabia, Honour says,
Love says no; thy stay here make.
Sir R. Fanshawe's translation of Querer pro solo Queror.

(b) Alphonso. But Honour says not so.

(c) Ent. Palladius softly reading 2. letters.
Pall. I stand betwixt two minds! what's best to doe? This bids me stay; This spurs me on to goe.
Once more let our impartiall eyes peruse.
Both t'one and t'other: Both may not prevale.
My Lord,

P
Rize not your honour so much as to disprize her that honours you, in choosing rather to meet Death in the field, then Pulchrella in her desires. Give my affection leave once more to dissuade you from trying Conquest with so unequall a Foe: Or if a Combate must be tryed, make a Bed of Roles the Field, and me your Enemie. The Interest I claim in you is sufficent warrant to my desires, which according to the place they find in your Respects, confirme me either the happiest of all Ladies, or make me the most unfortunate of all women. PULCHRELLA.

A Charme too strong for Honour to represse.
Mus. A heart too poore for Honour to posseffe.
Pall. Honour must stoop to Vows. But what saies this? [Reads the other Letter.]
My Lord,

T
HE hand that guides this Pen, being guided by the ambition of your honour, and my owne affection, pretents you with the wishes of a faithfull servant, who desires not to buy you safety with the hazard of your Reputation. Goe on with courage, and know, Panthea shall partake with you in either fortune: If conquer'd, my heart shall be your Monument, to preserve and glorifie your honour'd names; If a Conqueror, my tongue shall be your Herault to proclame you the Champion of our Sex, and the Phoenix of your own, honour'd by all, equall'd by few, beloved by none more dearly then Your owne Panthea.

I sayle betwixt two Rocks! What shall I doe?
What Marble melts not if Pulchrella woee?
Volscius sits down.

_Vols._ How has my passion made me Cupid's scotch! This hafty Boot is on, the other off, And sullen lyes, with amorous design To quit loud fame, and make that Beauty mine. My Legs, the Emblem of my various thought, Shew to what sad distraction I am brought. Sometimes, with stubborn Honour, like this Boot. My mind is guarded, and resolv'd to do't: Sometimes, again, that very mind, by Love Disarmed, like this other Leg does prove.

_JOHNS._ What pains Mr. _Bayes_ takes to act this speech himself!

_SML._ I, the fool, I see, is mightily transported with it.

_Vols._ Shall I to Honour or to Love give way? Go on, cries Honour; tender Love says, nay: Honour, aloud, commands, pluck both boots on; But softer Love does whisper, put on none. What shall I do? what conduct shall I find To lead me through this twy-light of my mind? For as bright Day with black approach of Night Contending, makes a doubtful puzzling light; So does my Honour and my Love together Puzzle me so, I can resolve for neither.

[Exit with one Boot on, and the other off.

_JOHNS._ By my troth, Sir, this is as difficult a Combat as ever I saw, and as equal; for 'tis determin'd on neither side.

_BAYES._ Ay, is't not, I gad, ha? For, to go off hip hop, hip hop, upon this occasion, is a thousand times better than any conclusion in the world, I gad. But, Sirs, you cannot make any judgement of this Play, because we are come but to the end of the second Act. Come, the Dance.

_Dance._

Well Gentlemen, you'll see this Dance, if I am not mistaken, take very well upon the Stage, when they are perfect in their motions, and all that.
Or what hard-hearted eare can be so dead,
As to be deafe, if faire Pantha pleaue?
Whom shall I pleaue? Or which shall I refuse?
Pulchrella sues, and fair Panthea sues:
Pulchrella melts me with her love-sick teares,
But brave Panthea batters downe my eares
With Love’s Pettarre: Pulchrellas breast encloes
A soft Affection wrapt in Beds of Roses.
But in the rare Panteas noble lines,
True Worth and Honour, with Affection joynes.
I stand even-balanc’d, doubtfully opprest,
Beneathe the burthen of a bivious brest.
When I peruse my sweet Pulchrellas teares,
My blood growes wanton, and I plunge in feares:
But when I read divine Panthea’s charmes,
I turne all fierie, and I grafp for armes.
Who ever saw, when a rude blast out-braves,
And thwarts the swelling Tide, how the proud waves
Rock the drencht Pinace on the Sea-greene brest
Of frowning Amphitrite, who opprest
Betwixt two Lords, (not knowing which t’ obey)
Remaines a Neuter in a doubtfull way.
So tost am I, bound to such strait confines,
Betwixt Pulchrella’s and Panthea’s lines.
Both cannot speed: But one that must prevale.
I stand even poys’d: an Atome turns the scale.

ACT. III. SC. II.  THE REHEARSAL.

Smi. I don't know 'twill take, Sir; but I am sure you sweat hard for't.

Bayes. Ay, Sir, it costs me more pains, and trouble, to do these things, than almost the things are worth.

Smi. By my troth, I think so, Sir.

Bayes. Not for the things themselves, for I could write you, Sir, forty of 'em in a day; but, I gad, these Players are such dull persons, that, if a man be not by upon every point, and at every turn, I gad, they'll mis take you, Sir, and spoil all.

Enter a Player.

What, is the Funeral ready?

Play. Yes, Sir.

Bayes. And is the Lance fill'd with Wine?

Play. Sir, 'tis just now a doing.

Bayes. Stay then; I'll do it my self.

Smi. Come, let's go with him.

Bayes. A match. But, Mr. Johnson, I gad, I am not like other persons; they care not what becomes of their things, so they can but get money for 'em: now, I gad, when I write, if it be not just as it should be, in every circumstance, to every particular, I gad, I am not able to endure it, I am not my self, I'm out of my wits, and all that, I'm the strangest person in the whole world. For what care I for my money? I gad, I write for Fame and Reputation.

[Exeunt.

Finis Actus Tertii.
2 Colonel Henry Howard, Son of Thomas Earl of Berkshire, made a Play, call'd the United Kingdoms, which began with a Funeral; and had also two Kings in it. This gave the Duke a just occasion to set up two Kings in Brentford, as 'tis generally believed; tho' others are of Opinion, that his grace had our two Brothers in his thoughts. It was Acted at the Cock-Pit in Drury-Lane, soon after the Restoration; but miscarrying on the stage, the Author had the Modesty not to Print it; and therefore, the Reader cannot reasonably expect any particular Passages of it. Others say, that they are Boabdilin and Abdalla, the two contending Kings of Granada, and Mr. Dryden has in most of his serious Plays two contending Kings of the same Place. . . . . . . . . . . Ky, 1704.
ACTUS IV. SCÆNA I.

BAYES, and the two Gentlemen.

BAYES. Gentlemen, because I would not have any two things alike in this Play, the last Act beginning with a witty Scene of mirth, I make this to begin with a Funeral.

SMI. And is that all your reason for it, Mr. Bayes?

BAYES. No, Sir; I have a precedent for it too. A person of Honour, and a Scholar, brought in his Funeral just so: and he was one (let me tell you) that knew as well what belong'd to a Funeral, as any man in England, I gad.¹

JOHNS. Nay, if that be so, you are safe.

BAYES. I gad, but I have another device, a frolick, which I think yet better than all this; not for the Plot or Characters, (for in my Heroick Plays, I make no difference, as to those matters) but for another contrivance.

SMI. What is that, I pray?

BAYES. Why, I have design'd a Conquest, that cannot possibly, I gad, be acted in less than a whole week: and I'll speak a bold word, it shall Drum, Trumpet, Shout and Battel, I gad, with any the most warlike Tragedy we have, either ancient or modern.

JOHNS. I marry, Sir; there you say something.

SMI. And pray, Sir, how have you order'd this same frolick of yours?

BAYES. Faith, Sir, by the Rule of Romance. For example: they divide their things into three, four, five, six, seven, eight, or as many Tomes as they please: now, I would very fain know, what should hinder me, from doing the same with my things, if I please.

JOHNS. Nay, if you should not be Master of your own works, 'tis very hard.
1 Bp. Percy says:—
This is intended to ridicule the absurd custom of writing plays in several parts, as the Siege of Rhodes, Parts I. and II. Killigrew's Bellamira I and II. Thomafo I. and II. Cicilia and Clorinda, I. and II. &c.; but is principally levelled at the Conquest of Granada in 2 Parts: which is properly but one play of ten acts, neither the plot nor characters being compleat or intelligible in either without the other.

2 Bp. Percy considers that this refers to Conquest of Granada, Part II. Act iv,
ACT. IV. SC. I. THE REHEARSAL. 93

BAYES. That is my fence. And therefore, Sir, whereas every one makes five Acts to one Play, what do me I, but make five Plays to one Plot: by which means the Auditors have every day a new thing.

JOHNS. Most admirably good, i' faith! and must certainly take, because it is not tedious.

BAYES. I, Sir, I know that, there's the main point. And then, upon Saturday, to make a clofe of all, (for I ever begin upon a Monday) I make you, Sir, a sixth Play, that sums up the whole matter to 'em, and all that, for fear they should have forgot it.¹

JOHNS. That consideration, Mr. Bayes, indeed, I think, will be very necessary.

SMII. And when comes in your share, pray Sir?

BAYES. The third week.

JOHNS. I vow, you'll get a world of money.

BAYES. Why, faith, a man must live: and if you don't, thus, pitch upon some new device, I gad, you'll never do it, for this Age (take it o' my word) is somewhat hard to please. There is one prettie odd passage, in the last of these Plays, which may be executed to several ways, wherein I'd have your opinion, Gentlemen.

JOHNS. Well, what is't?

BAYES. Why, Sir, I make a Male person to be in Love with a Female.

SMII. Do you mean that, Mr. Bayes, for a new thing?

BAYES. Yes, sir, as I have order'd it. You shall hear. He having passionately lov'd her through my five whole Plays, finding at last that she consents to his love, just after that his Mother had appear'd to him like a Ghost, he kills himself. That's one way. The other is, that she coming at last to love him, with as violent a passion as he lov'd her, she kills her self.² Now my question is, which of these two persons should suffer upon this occasion?

JOHNS. By my troth, it is a very hard case to decide.

BAYES. The hardeft in the world, I gad; and has 1 The Ghost [of his mother] comes on, softly, after the Conjuration; and Almanzor retires to the middle of the Stage.

Ghost. I am the Ghost of her who gave thee birth: The Airy shadow of her mouldring Earth. Love of thy Father me through Seas did guide; On Sea's I bore thee, and on Sea's I dy'd. I dy'd; and for my Winding-sheet, a Wave I had; and all the Ocean for my Grave.

2 Almanzor, in Conquest of Granada.
puzzled this pate very much. What say you, Mr. Smith?

Smi. Why, truly, Mr. Bayes, if it might stand with your justice, I should now spare 'em both.

Bayes. I gad, and I think——ha——why then, I'Il make him hinder her from killing her self. Ay, it shall be so. Come, come, bring in the Funeral.

[Enter a Funeral, with the two Usurpers and Attendants.

Lay it down there: no, here, Sir. So, now speak.

K. Ush. Set down the Funeral Pile, and let our grief Receive, from its embraces, some relief.

K. Phys. Was't not unjust to ravish hence her breath, And, in life's flead, to leave us nought but death?

The world discovers now its emptiness, And, by her loss, demonstrates we have lefs.

Bayes. Is not that good language now? is not that elevate? It's my non ultra, I gad. You must know they were both in love with her.

Smi. With her? with whom?

Bayes. Why, this is Lardella's Funeral.

Smi. Lardella! I, who is she?

Bayes. Why, Sir, the Sister of Drawcanfir. A Ladie that was drown'd at Sea, and had a wave for her winding-sheet.¹

K. Ush. Lardella, O Lardella, from above, Behold the Tragick issue of our Love. Pitie us, sinking under grief and pain, For thy being cast away upon the Main.

Bayes. Look you now, you see I told you true.

Smi. I, Sir, and I thank you for it, very kindly.

Bayes. Ay, I gad, but you will not have patience; honest Mr.—a——you will not have patience.

Johns. Pray, Mr. Bayes, who is that Drawcanfir?²

Bayes. Why, Sir, a fierce Hero, that frights his Miltiffs, snubs up Kings, baffles Armies, and does what he will, without regard to good manners, justice or numbers.

Johns. A very prettie Character.
I have form'd a Heroe [i.e. Almanzor], I confess; not absolutely perfect; but of an excessive and overboyling courage, both Homer and Iasso are my precedents. Both the Greek and the Italian Poet had well consider'd that a tame Heroe who never transgresses the bounds of moral vertue, would shine but dimly in an Epick poem.

J. Dryden. Dedication to Conquest of Granada.
See also on this subject, the prefatory Essay to the same play, entitled Of Heroique Plays.
Smi. But, Mr. Bayes, I thought your Heroes had ever been men of great humanity and justice.

Bayes. Yes, they have been so; but, for my part, I prefer that one quality of finely beating of whole Armies, above all your moral vertues put together, I gad. You shall see him come in presently. Zookers, why don't you read the papyr? [To the Players.

X. Phys. O, cry you mercie. [Goes to take the papyr.

Bayes. Pifh! nay you are such a fumbler. Come, I'll read it my self. [Takes a papyr from off the coffin.

Stay, it's an ill hand, I must use my spectacles. This, now, is a Copie of Verfes, which I make Lardella compose, just as she is dying, with design to have it pin'd on her Coffin, and so read by one of the Usurpers, who is her Cousin.

Smi. A very shrewd design that, upon my word, Mr. Bayes.

Bayes. And what do you think I fancy her to make Love like, here, in the papyr?

Smi. Like a woman: what should she make Love like?

Bayes. O' my word you are out though, Sir; I gad you are.

Smi. What then? like a man?

Bayes. No, Sir; like a Humble Bee.

Smi. I confes, that I should not have fancy'd.

Bayes. It may be so, Sir. But it is, though, in order to the opinion of some of your ancient Philosophers, who held the transmigration of the soul.

Smi. Very fine.

Bayes. I'll read the Title. To my dear Cous, King Phys.

Smi. That's a little too familiar with a King, though, Sir, by your favour, for a Humble Bee.

Bayes. Mr. Smith, for other things, I grant your knowledge may be above me; but, as for Poetry, give me leave to say, I understand that better; it has been longer my practice; it has indeed, Sir.

Smi. Your fervant, Sir.

Bayes. Pray mark it. [Reads.
Berenice. My earthly part——
Which is my Tyrants right, death will remove,
I'll come all Soul and Spirit to your Love.
With silent steps I'll follow you all day;
Or else before you, in the Sun-beams, play.
I'll lead you thence to melancholy Groves,
And there repeat the Scenes of our past Loves.

At night, I will within your Curtains peep;
With empty arms embrace you while you sleep.
In gentle dreams I often will be by;
And sweep along, before your closing eye.

All dangers from your bed I will remove;
But guard it most from any future Love.
And when at last, in pity, you will dye,

I'll watch your Birth of Immortality:
Then, Turtle-like, I'll to my Mate repair;
And teach you your first flight in open Air.

Since death my earthly part will thus remove,
I'll come a Humble Bee to your chaste love.
With silent wings I'll follow you, dear Couz;
Or else, before you, in the Sun-beams buzz.
And when to Melancholy Groves you come,
An Airy Ghost, you'll know me by my Hum;
For found, being Air, a Ghost does well become.

Smi. (After a pause). Admirable!

Bayes. At night, into your bosom I will creep,
And Buzz but softly if you chance to sleep:
Yet, in your Dreams, I will pass sweeping by,
And then, both Human Buzz before your eye.

Johns. By my troth, that's a very great promise.
Smi. Yes, and a most extraordinary comfort to boot.

Bayes. Your bed of Love, from dangers I will free;
But most, from love of any future Bee.
And when, with pitie, your heart-strings shall crack,
With empty arms I'll bear you on my back.

Smi. A pick-a-pack, a pick-a-pack.
Bayes. Ay, I gad, but is not that tuant now, ha? is it not tuant? Here's the end.

Then, at your birth of immortality,
Like any winged Archer, hence I'll fly,
And teach you your first flutt'ring in the Sky.

Johns. O rare! it is the most natural, refin'd fancie this, that ever I heard, I'll swear.

Bayes. Yes, I think, for a dead person, it is a good enough way of making love: for being divested of her Terrestrial part, and all that, she is only capable of these little, pretty, amorous designs that are innocent, and yet passionate. Come, draw your swords.

K. Phys. Come sword, come sheath thy self within this breast,
That only in Lardella's Tomb can rest.
ILLUSTRATIONS, &c.

1: See the Scene in the Villain: where the Hoft furnishes his guests with a collation out of his Cloaths; a Capon from his Helmet, a Tanfey out of the Lining of his Cap, Cream out of his Scabard, &c. . . . . . . . Key 1704.

The text of this Scene, which must have depended much more upon the acting than the speeches for its success, is as follows:

Hoft. 'Tis the Sign of the Pig, and I'm the Master of the Cabaret, which shall give you most Excellent content.

Colig. Say'lt thou so honest fellow? faith thou art a very merry honest fellow; Sifters, I'll treat you, and these Gentlemen, at this Cabaret he talks of; Prethee honest Friend where is this Cabaret? for I long to be in a Cabaret.

Hoft. Why here Sir, sit down at this Table, And call for what you will.

Delpe. How's this, how's this? S'dearth are you one of Urgandis Squiers? pray friend whence shall the meat, and wine come?

Lamar. From Tripoli on a Broomstick.

Hoft. Pray Gentlemen, hinder me not the Custoem of the young gallant; Entreat but these Ladies to sit down, and break my head If you be not well treated, I'll desire no favour.

Colig. Nor no money neither, I hope Sir.

Hoft. Truly I won't; if you be not pleaf'd above expectation, Ne's Truft one again of my profession.

Delpe. Faith Ladies this may prove worth our Curiosity; Come we will fit down.

Maria. What you pleafe Sir.

Colig. That's my good Sifter; Come, come, La Couvert, la Couvert.

Lamar. This begins to look like somthing, he's bravely stufft I'll warrant you, he is so well hung.

Colig. Now Sir, a cold breft of your delicate white Veal.

Hoft. Here you have it Sir.

Colig. Nay, nay, and a fallet? good Sir, a fallet?

Hoft. Well Sir, I must untrufs a poynpt.

Colig. How Sir, to give us a fallet? why have you been at grafts?

Delpe. Why d'ye want a boyl'd fallet Mounsier?

Lamar. Before St. Lewis an Excellent Trimming, I'll ha' my next Suit, that I go into the Campaign with, trimm'd all with Safages.

Maria. 'Twill make many a hungry Souldier aim at you.

Colig. Well thought on ifaith Sir. Come friend, a Difh of Safages, a disf of Safages.

Hoft. Why look you Sir, this Gentleman only miftook the placing, these do better in a belt.

Continued at pp. 104, 106.
ACT. IV. SC. I. THE REHEARSAL. 101

K. Ufth. Come, dagger, come, and penetrate this heart,
Which cannot from Lardella's Love depart.

_Enter Pallas.

_Pal. Hold, stop your murd'ring hands
At Pallafes commands:
For the supposed dead, O Kings,
Forbear to act such deadly things.
_Lardella lives: I did but try
If Princes for their Loves could dye,
Such Celestial constancie
Shall, by the Gods, rewarded be:
And from these Funeral obsequies
A Nuptial Banquet shall arise.
[The Coffin opens, and a Banquet is discover'd.

_BAYES. Now it's out. This is the very Funeral of the fair person which Volscius sent word was dead, and Pallas, you see, has turn'd it into a Banquet.

_JOHNS. By my troth, now, that is new, and more than I expected.

_BAYES. Yes, I knew this would please you: for the chief Art in Poetry is to elevate your expectation, and then bring you off some extraordinary way.

_K. Ufth. Resplendent Pallas, we in thee do find
The fiercest Beauty, and a fiercer mind:
And since to thee Lardella's life we owe,
We'll supple Statues in thy Temple grow.

_K. Phys. Well, since alive Lardella's found,
Let, in full Boles, her health go round.

[The two usurpers take each of them a Bole in their hands.

_K. Ufth. But where's the Wine?

_Pal. That shall be mine.
Lo, from this conquering Lance,
Does flow the purest wine of France:
And, to appease your hunger, I
Have, in my Helmet, brought a Pye:
Lastly, to bear a part with these,
Behold a Buckler made of Cheese. [Vanish Pallas.
1 Enter Almahide with a Taper.
Almahide. My Light will sure discover those who talk;
Who dares to interrupt my private Walk?
Almansor. He who dares love; and for that love must dye,
And, knowing this, dares yet love on, am I.

2 I will not now, if thou wouldst beg me, stay;
But I will take my Almahide away.

3 Almansor. Thou darst not marry her while I’m in fight;
With a bent brow thy Priest and thee I’ll fright,
And in that Scene
Which all thy hopes and wishes should content,
The thought of me shall make thee impotent.
He is led off by Guards.

4 Almansor. Spight of my self I’ll stay, Fight, Love, Despair,
And I can do all this, because I dare.
Enter Drawcanfur.

1 K. Phys. What man is this that dares disturb our feast?

Draw. He that dares drink, and for that drink dares die,

And, knowing this, dares yet drink on, am I.

Johns. That is as much as to say, that though he would rather die than not drink, yet he would fain drink for all that too.

Bayes. Right; that's the conceit o'rt.

Johns. 'Tis a marvelous good one; I swear.

K. Ush. Sir, if you please we should be glad to know

How long you here will stay, how soon you'll go.

Bayes. Is not that now like a well-bred person,

I gad? So modest, so gentle!

Smi. O, very like.

2 Draw. You shall not know how long I here will stay;

But you shall know I'll take my Boles away.

_Snatches the Boles out of the Kings hands, and drinks 'em off._

Smi. But, Mr. Bayes, is that (too) modest and gentle?

Bayes. No, I gad, Sir, but it's great.

K. Ush. Though, Brother, this grum stranger be a Clown,

He'll leave us, sure, a little to gulp down.

3 Draw. Who e'er to gulp one drop of this dares think

I'll stare away his very pow'r to drink.

_The two Kings sneeze off the Stage, with their Attendants._

*I drink, I huff, I strut, look big and flare;

And all this I can do, because I dare._

[Exit.

Smi. I suppose, Mr. Bayes, this is the fierce Hero

you spoke of.

Bayes. Yes; but this is nothing: you shall see him, in the last Act, win above a dozen battels, one after another,

I gad, as fast as they can possibly be represented.

Johns. That will be a sight worth seeing, indeed.

Smi. But pray, Mr. Bayes, why do you make the Kings let him use 'em so fercibly?

Franc. A strange fellow this.
Delpe. I, is it not? come Sir, wine we see you have a Prethee let's taft the beft.
Hoft. That you shall Sir;
If you'll hear Musick, and a Song with't,
I'm ready: you shall want nothing here.

Sings.
Yee may Tipple, and Tipple, and Tipple all out,
Till yee baffe the Stars, and the Sun face about.

Delpe. Away with your Drunken songs, have you nothing fitter to please the Ladies?
Hoft. Yes Sir.
Delpe. Come away with it then.
Hoft. Sing.
Colig. Most Excellent ifaith! Here's to thee honest fellow with all my heart; nay flay a little, this is very good VVine;
here's to thee again——heark ye honest fellow, let me speake with you aside. D'yee Count here by pieces or d'yee treat by the head?
Hoft. I'll treat by the head Sir, if you please; a Crown a head, and you shall have excellent cheer, VVine as much as you can drink.
Colig. That's honestly said; you know my father friend, tis Monsieur Cortaux.
Hoft. Yes Sir, the famous Scrivener here of Tours.
Colig. VVell, treat us very well, I'll see thee pay'd.
Hoft. Nay Sir, I'll see myself pay'd, I'll warrant you, before you and I part.
Colig. I do mean it so honest friend, but prethee speake not a word to the Gentlemen, for then you quite disgrace, Sir, your most humble Servant.
Hoft. Mum, a word to the wife is enough.
Colig. Come, come, Friend where's the Capon of Bruges you last spoke of?
Hoft. Here at hand Sir, Wife undo my Helmet, this, Sir,
Is my Creft.
Delpe. A very improper one for a marri'd man.
Colig. Yes faith and troth, he should have had horns, ha, ha, ha,
Here's to yee noble Captain; a very good jest
As I am a Gentleman:
Delpe. I thank you Sir!
Colig. Methink's you are melancholly, Sir!
Lo'ma. Not I Sir, I can affure you: Lady's how

Like ye the sport, an odd Collation, but well Contriv'd.

Franc. The contrivance is all in all.

Concluded at p. 106.
ACT. IV. SC. II.  THE REHEARSAL.

AYES. Phoo! that is to raise the character of Drakewasifir.

JOHNS. O' my word, that was well thought on.

AYES. Now, Sir, I'll shew you a Scene indeed; or rather, indeed, the Scene of Scenes. 'Tis an Heroick Scene.

SMI. And pray, Sir, what is your design in this Scene?

AYES. Why, Sir, my design is Roman Cloaths, guilded Truncheons, forc'd conceipt, smooth Verfe, and a Rant: In fine, if this Scene does not take, I gad, 'twill write no more. Come, come in, Mr.——a——nay, come in as many as you can. Gentlemen, I must desire you to remove a little, for I must fill the Stage.

SMI. Why fill the Stage?

AYES. O, Sir, because your Heroick Verfe never founds well, but when the Stage is full.

SCÆNA II.

Enter Prince Pretty-man, and Prince Volscius.

AYE. Ay, hold, hold; pray by your leave a little. Look you, Sir, the drift of this Scene is somewhat more than ordinary: for I make 'em both fall out because they are not in love with the fame woman.

SMI. Not in love? you mean, I suppose, because they are in love, Mr. Ayes?

AYES. No, Sir; I say not in love: there's a new conceipt for you. Now, speak.

PRET. Since fate, Prince Volscius, has found out the way
   For our so long'd-for meeting here this day,
   Lend thy attention to my grand concern.

VOLS. I gladly would that glory of thee learn;
   But thou to love doft, Pretty-man, incline:
   Yet love in thy breast is not love in mine.

AYES. Antithesis! thine and mine.
ILLUSTRATIONS, &c.

Concluded from p. 104.

Mr. ria. What makes my Brother kneel, look, look Sifter.
Colig. Here's a health to our noble Colonel,
Gentlemen, ye see 'tis a good one!
D'elp. Yes, and a large one, but if both drink it
How shall we lead your Sisters home!
Come, come a Tanfey Surrath quickly.
D'elp. Has pos'd ye there mine Hoft.
Hoft. That's as time shall try, look ye here Sir.
The lining of my Cap is good for something.
La'mar. Faith this was unlook'd for.
D'elp. S'fish I think all his apparel is made of commendable Stuff; has he not Ginger-bread-shoes on.
Hoft. No truly Sir: 'tis seldom call'd for in a Tavern,

Colig. Nay I've no need on't, faith thou art a brave Fellow: Here's mine Hoft's health Gentlemen.
D'elp. Could you procure these Ladies a dish of Cream
Sir, this will shew your Master-piece!
Hoft. 'Tis the only weapon I fight at; look ye
Gentlemen the thunder has melted my sword
In the th'cabard, But 'tis good, taste it.
D'elp. Th' aft my Verdict to be the wonder of Hofts, Shalt have a Patent for't if I have any Power at Court.

ACT. IV. SC. II.  THE REHEARSAL.  107

Pret. Since love it fell’s the same, why should it be Diffring in you from what it is in me?
Bayes. Reasoning; I gad, I love reasoning in verse.
Vols. Love takes, Cameleon-like, a various dye
        From every Plant on which it self does lye.
Bayes. Simile!
Pret. Let not thy love the course of Nature fright:
        Nature does most in harmony delight.
Vols. How weak a Deity would Nature prove Contending with the pow’rful God of Love?
Bayes. There’s a great Verfe!
Vols. If Incense thou wilt offer at the Shrine
        Of mighty Love, burn it to none but mine.
        Her Rosie-lips external sweets exhale;
        And her bright flames make all flames else look pale.
Bayes. I gad, that is right.
Pret. Perhaps dull Incense may thy love suffice;
        But mine must be ador’d with Sacrifice.
        All hearts turn ashes which her eyes controul;
        The Body they consume as well as Soul.
Vols. My love has yet a power more Divine;
        Victims her Altars burn not, but refine;
        Amid’ll the flames they ne’er give up the Ghost,
        But, with her looks, revive still as they roaft.
        In spite of pain and death, they’re kept alive;
        Her fiery eyes makes ’em in fire sur vive.
Bayes. That is as well as I can do.
Vols. Let my Parthenope at length prevail.
Bayes. Civil, I gad.
Pret. I’ll sooner have a passion for a Whale:
        In whose vast bulk, though store of Oyl doth lye,
        We find more shape more beauty in a Fly.
Smi. That’s uncivil, I gad.
Bayes. Yes; but as far a fetch’d fancie, though,
        I gad, as ever you saw.
1 Maximin. Thou ly'ft:—there's not a God inhabits there,
But for this Christian would all Heav'n forswear.
Ev'n Jove would try more shapes her Love to win:
And in new birds, and unknown beasts would fin;
At least, if Jove could love like Maximin.

(a) Maximin. Stay; if thou speak'st that word, thou speak'st thy last:
Some God now, if he dares, relate what's past:
Say but he's dead, that God shall mortal be.

(b) Maximin. Provoke my rage no farther, left I be Reveng'd at once upon the Gods and thee.

Vols. Soft, Pretty-man, let not thy vain pretence
   Of perfect love, defame loves excellence.
Parthenope is sure as far above
   All other loves, as above all is Love.
Bayes. Ah! I gad, that strikes me.
Pret. To blame my Cloris, Gods would not pretend.
Bayes. Now mark.
Vols. Were all Gods joyn'd, they could not hope to mend.
   My better choice: for fair Parthenope,
   Gods would, themselves, un-god themselves to see.
Bayes. Now the Rant's a coming.
Pret. Durst any of the Gods be so uncivil,
   I'd make that God subscribe himself a Devil.
Bayes. Ah, Godlookers, that's well writ!
Vols. Could'lt thou that God from Heav'n to Earth translate,
   He could not fear to want a Heav'nly State.
Parthenope, on Earth, can Heav'n create.
Pret. Cloris does Heav'n it self so far excel,
   She can transcend the joys of Heav'n in Hell.
Bayes. There's a bold flight for you now! 'Sdeath,
I have lost my peruke. Well, Gentlemen, this is that I never yet saw any one could write, but my self.
Here's true spirit and flame all through, I gad. So,
So; pray clear the Stage. [He puts 'em off the Stage.
Johns. But, Mr. Bayes, pray why is this Scene all in Verfe?
Bayes. O, Sir, the subject is too great for Prose.
Smi. Well said, i' faith; I'll give thee a pot of Ale for that answer: 'tis well worth it.
Bayes. Come, with all my heart.
I'll make that God subscribe himself a Devil.
That single line, I gad, is worth all that my brother
Poets ever writ. So, now let down the Curtain.
[Exeunt.

Finis Actus Quarti.
ACTUS V. SCÆNA I.

BAYES, and the two Gentlemen.

BAYES. Now, Gentlemen, I will be bold to say, I'll shew you the greatest Scene that ever England saw: I mean not for words, for those I do not value; but for state, shew, and magnificence. In fine, I'll justify it to be as grand to the eye every whit, I gad, as that great Scene in Harry the Eighth, and grander too, I gad; for, instead of two Bishops, I have brought in two other Cardinals.

The Curtain is drawn up, and the two usurping Kings appear in state, with the four Cardinals, Prince Pretty-man, Prince Volscius, Amarillis, Cloris, Parthenope, &c. before them, Heralds and Serjeants at Arms with Maces.

Smi. Mr. Bayes, pray what is the reason that two of the Cardinals are in Hats, and the other in Caps?

BAYES. Why, Sir, because—By gad, I won't tell you.

Smi. I ask your pardon, Sir.

K. Uffa. Now, Sir, to the business of the day.

Vols. Dread Sovereign Lords, my zeal to you, must not invade my duty to your Son; let me intreat that great Prince Pretty-man first do speak: whose high preheminence, in all things that do bear the name of good, may justly claim that priviledge.

Pret. Royal Father, upon my knees I beg
That the Illustrious Volscius first be heard.

BAYES. Here it begins to unfold: you may perceive, now, that he is his Son.
1 In Sept. 1656, Sir W. D'Avenant published 'The Siege of Rhodes, made a Representation by the Art of Prospective in Scenes, And the story sung in Recitative Music. At the back of Rutland-House in the upper end of Aldersgate-Sreet, London.' Instead of Acts, there are five 'Entries.' This constituted Part I. The second part was published in 1663.

In 'The first Entry,' p. 4.

Enter Alphonso.

1 Alphon. What various Noises do mine ears invade?
And have a Content of confusion made!

* Nakar and Damilcar descend in Clouds, and sing.

Nakar. Hark, my Damilcar, we are call'd below!

Dam. Let us go, let us go!
Go to relieve the care
Of longing Lovers in despair!

Nakar. Merry, merry, merry, we sail from the East Half tippled at a Rain-bow Feast.

Dam. In the bright Moon-shine while winds whistle
Tivy, tivy, tivy, we mount and we fly, [loud,
All racking along in a downy white Cloud:
And left our leap from the Skie should prove too far,
JOHNS. Yes, Sir; and we are very much beholden to you for that discovery.

Vols. That preference is only due to Amarillis, Sir.

BAYES. I'll make her speak very well, by and by; you shall see.

AMA. Invincible Soveraigns—— [Soft Musick.

K. Ufth. But stay, what sound is this invades our ears?

K. Phys. Sure 'tis the Musick of the moving Spheres.

PRIT. Behold, with wonder, yonder comes from far
A God-like-Cloud, and a triumphant Carr:
In which, our two right Kings sit one by one,
With Virgin Vefts, and Laurel Garlands on.

K. Ufth. Then, Brother Phys', 'tis time that we were gone. | The two Ufurpers steal out of the Throne, and go away.

BAYES. Look you now, did not I tell you that this would be as easy a turn as the other?

SMi. Yes, faith, you did so; though I confess, I could not believe you; but you have brought it about, I see.

The two right Kings of Brentford descend in the Clouds, jingling in white garments; and three Fidlers sitting before them, in green.

BAYES. Now, because the two Right Kings descend from above, I make 'em sing to the Tune and Stile of our modern Spirits.

1 King. Haste, brother King, we are sent from above.

2 King. Let us move, let us move:
Move to remove the Fate
Of Brentfords long united State.

1 King. Tara, tara, tara, full East and by South,

2 King. We fail with Thunder in our mouth,
In searing noon-day, whilst the traveller slays,
Busie, busie, busie, busie, we busle along.
Mounted upon warm Phæbus his Rayes,
Through the Heavenly throng, Haste to those

H
ILLUSTRATIONS, &c.
BAYES. He's here with a whoop, and gone with a holla. This, Sir, you must know, I thought once to have brought in with a Conjurer.

JOHNS. I, that would have been better.

BAYES. No, faith, not when you consider it: for thus 'tis more compendious, and does the thing every whit as well.

SMI. Thing! what thing?

BAYES. Why, bring 'em down again into the Throne, Sir; what thing would you have?

SMI. Well; but, methinks, the Sense of this Song is not very plain.

BAYES. Plain? why, did you ever hear any people in Clouds speak plain? They must be all for flight of fancie, at its full range, without the least check, or controul upon it. When once you tye up spirits, and people in Clouds to speak plain, you spoil all.

SMI. Blefs me, what a Monfter's this!

The two Kings light out of the Clouds, and step into the Throne.

1 King. Come, now to ferious counfel we'll advance.

2 King. I do agree; but firft, let's have a Dance.

BAYES. Right. You did that very well, Mr. Cartwright. But firft, let's have a Dance. Pray remember that; be sure you do it always just so: for it must be done as if it were the effect of thought, and premeditation. But firft, let's have a Dance. Pray remember that.

SMI. Well, I can hold no longer, I must gag this rogue; there's no induring of him.

JOHNS. No, pr'ythee make use of thy patience a little longer: let's see the end of him now.

[Dance a grand Dance.

BAYES. This, now, is an ancient Dance, of right belonging to the Kings of Brentford; and since deriv'd, with a little alteration, to the Inns of Court.

An Alarm. Enter two Heralds.
1. Enter Abdelmelech.

Boabdelen. What new misfortune do these Cries presage?

John Dryden.—Conquest of Granada, Part II. Act i. p. 78.
Ed. 1672.

2. Enter a Second Messengers.

Sec. Meff. Hast ye all you can their fury to appease.
You are not safe from their rebellious rage.

Enter a Third Messenger.

Third Meff. This Minute if you grant not their desire They'll seize your Person and your Palace Fire.

ACT. V.

THE REHEARSAL.

1 King. What fawcie Groom molefts our privacies?
1 Her. The Army's at the door, and in disguise, Defires a word with both your Majesties:
2 Her. Having, from Knights-bridge, hither march'd by stealth.
2 King. Bid 'em attend a while, and drink our health.

SMI. How, Mr. Bayes, the Army in disguise?
Bayes. Ay, Sir, for fear the Usurpers might discover them that went out but just now.

SMI. Why, what if they had discover'd them?
Bayes. Why then they had broke this design.
SMI. That's true, indeed. I did not think of that.

1 King. Here, take five Guineys for thofe warlike men.
2 King. And here's five more; that makes the sum juft ten.

1 Her. We have not seen fo much the Lord knows.
[Exeunt Heralds.]

1 King. Speak on, brave Amarillis.
Ama. Invincible Sovereigns, blame not my modesty,
    If at this grand conjuncture—— [Drum beats behind the Stage.

1 King. What dreadful noife is this that comes and goes?
    Enter a Soldier with his Sword drawn.

2 Sold. Hastle hence, great Sirs, your Royal perfons save.
    For the event of war no mortal knows:
    The Army, wrangling for the gold you gave,
    Firft fell to words, and then to handy-blowes.
[Exit.

2 King. O dangerous etate of Sovereign pow'r!
    Obnoxious to the change of every hour.
1 King. Let us for shelter in our Cabinet stay:
    Perhaps these threat'ning storms may pass away.
[Exeunt.

JOHNS. But, Mr. Bayes, did not you promise us, juft now, to make Amarillis speak very well?
Bayes. Ay, and fo she would have done, but that they hinder'd her.
ACT. V.

THE REHEARSAL.

SMII. How, Sir? whether you would or no?

BAYES. Ay, Sir; the Plot lay so that, I vow to gad, it was not to be avoided.

SMII. Marry, that was hard.

JOHNS. But, pray, who hinder'd her?

BAYES. Why, the battel, Sir, that's just coming in at door. And I'll tell you now a strange thing: though I don't pretend to do more than other men, I gad, I'll give you both a whole week to ghefs how I'll reprent this Battel.

SMII. I had rather be bound to fight your Battel, Sir, I assure you.

BAYES. Why, there's it now: fight a Battel? there's the common error. I knew prentely where I should have you. Why, pray, Sir, do but tell me this one thing, Can you think it a decent thing, in a battel before Ladies, to have men run their Swords through one another, and all that?

JOHNS. No, faith, 'tis not civil.

BAYES. On the other side; to have a long relation of Squadrons here, and Squadrons there: what is that but a dull prolixity?

JOHNS. Excellently reason'd, by my troth!

BAYES. Wherefore, Sir, to avoid both those Indecorums, I sum up my whole battel in the representation of two persons only, no more: and yet so lively, that, I vow to gad, you would swear ten thousand men were at it, really engag'd. Do you mark me?

SMII. Yes, Sir; but I think I should hardly swear, though, for all that.

BAYES. By my troth, Sir, but you would, though, when you see it: for I make 'em both come out in Armor, Cap-a-pea, with their Swords drawn, and hung, with a scarlet Ribbon at their wrists, (which, you know, represents fighting enough) each of 'em holding a Lute in his hand.

SMII. How, Sir, instead of a Buckler?

BAYES. O Lord, O Lord! instead of a Buckler? Pray, Sir, do you ask no more questions. I make 'em,
(a) Arm, Arm, Villerius, Arm!
Sir W. D'Avenant. Siege of Rhodes. 'The first Entry.' p. 3. Ed. 1656.

(b) 'The Third Entry' thus begins.

Enter Solyman, Pirrhus, Mustapha.

Solymp. Pirrhus. Draw up our Army wide!
Then, from the Grofs two strong Reserves divide;
And spread the wings;
As if we were to fight
In the lofts Rhodians fight
With all the Western Kings!
Each Wing with Fanizaries line;
The Right and Left to Hally's Sons assigne;
The Grofs to Zangiban.
The Main Artillery
With Muslapha shall be:
Bring thou the Rear, We lead the Van.

(c) At the beginning of 'The fifth Entry' is,

Mustapha. Point well the Cannon, and play fast!
Their fury is too hot to last.
That Rampire shakes! they fly into the Town!
Pirrh. March up with those Reserves to that Redout, Faint Slaves! the Fanizaries reel!
They bend, they bend! and seem to feel
The terrors of a Rout.

Mustapha. Old Zanger halts, and reinforcement lacks!
Pirrh. March on Mustapha. Advance those Pikes, and charge their Backs.

Idem, p. 30.
Sir, play the battle in Recitative. And here's the conceit. Just at the very same instant that one sings, the other, Sir, recovers you his Sword, and puts himself in a warlike posture: so that you have at once your ear entertain'd with Musick, and good Language, and your eye satisfy'd with the garb, and accoutrements of war. Is not that well?

JOHNS. I, what would you have more? he were a Devil that would not be satisfy'd with that.

SMR. I confess, Sir, you floutifie me.

BAYES. You shall fee.

JOHNS. But, Mr. BAYES, might not we have a little fighting for I love those Plays, where they cut and flash one another, upon the Stage, for a whole hour together.

BAYES. Why, then, to tell you true, I have contriv'd it both ways. But you shall have my Recitative first.

Enter, at several doors, the General, and Lieutenant General, arm'd Cap-a-pea, with each of them a Lute in his hand, and his sword drawn, and hung, with a scarlet Ribbon at his wrist.

Gen. Arm, arm, Gonfallo, arm; what ho? The lye no flesh can brook, I trow.

Lieut. Gen. Advance, from Acton, with the Musquetiers.

Gen. Draw down the Chelsey Curiafiyers.

Lieut. Gen. The Band you boast of, Chelsey Curiafiyers, Shall, in my Putney Pikes, now meet their Peers.

Gen. Chesswickians, aged, and renown'd in fight, Joyn with the Hammersmith Brigade.

Lieut. Gen. You'll find my Mortlake Boys will do them right, Unlefs by Fulham numbers over-laid.

Gen. Let the left-wing of Twicknam foot advance And line that Eastern hedge.
Lieut. Gen. The Horse I rais’d in Petty-France
Shall try their chance.
And scour the Medows, over-grown with Sedge.
Gen. Stand: give the word.
Lieut. Gen. Bright Sword.
Gen. That may be thine.
But ‘tis not mine.
Lieut. Gen. Give fire, give fire, at once give fire,
And let those recreant Troops perceive mine ire.
Gen. Pursue, pursue; they fly
That first did give the ly.  [Exeunt.

Bayes. This, now, is not improper, I think, because the Spectators know all these Towns, and may easily conceive them to be within the Dominions of the two Kings of Brentford.
Johns. Most exceeding well design’d!
Bayes. How do you think I have contriv’d to give a stop to this battle?
Smi. How?
Bayes. By an Eclipse: Which, let me tell you, is a kind of fancie that was yet never so much as thought of, but by my self, and one person more, that shall be nameless. Come, come in, Mr.——a—— Enter Lieutenant General.

Lieut. Gen. What mid-night darkness does invade the day,
And snatch the Victor from his conquer’d prey?
Is the Sun weary of his bloody sight,
And winks upon us with his eye of light?
’Tis an Eclipse. This was unkind, O Moon,
To clap between me, and the Sun so soon.
Foolish Eclipse! thou this in vain hast done;
My brighter honour had Eclips’d the Sun.
But now behold Eclipses two in one.  [Exit.

Johns. This is an admirable representation of a Battle, as ever I saw.
1 Enter Aurora in a black Veil below.
   Song in Dialogue.

Aur. Phœbus?
Phæb. Who calls the World's great Light?
Aur. Aurora, that abhors the Night.
Phæb. Why does Aurora from her Cloud
   To drowifie Phæbus cry so loud?
Aur. Put on thy Beams; rife, (no regard
   To a young Goddes, that lies hard
In th' old Man's bofome?) rife for shame,
   And shine my Cloud into a Flame.
Phæb. Oblige me not beyond my pow'r,
I must not rife before my hour.
Aur. Before thy hour? look down, and see,
In vain the Persian kneels to thee,
And I (mock'd by the glim'ring Shade)
A fad mistake in Naples made;
Like Pliny, I had loft my life,
If I had been a Mortal Wife.
Phæb. Thou canst too near the Burning Mount Vesuvio?
Aur. Upon thy account,
   For I took Clownds of Smoke and Fire,
   (which here from Vulcan's Court expire)
   For Morning-streaks, Blew, White, and Red,
   That Rout me from cold Tithon's Bed.

   [Phœbus enters with his Beams &c.

Phæb. Charge not upon me for a Crime,
   That I flaid th' utmost point of time,
   Before I would put off my Bays,
   And on Naples thied my Rays,
where such a mischief they have done,
As will make Venus hate the Sun,
   Discovering to Vulcan's eye
   Where She and Mars embracing lie.

Aur. I'm sorry Mars and Venus had Such privacy: but I am glad that Phœbus does at last appear To shine away Aurora's Fear.

Phæb. What frighted thee?
Aur. I know not what:
   But thou know'st all; what noise is that?

   [Within Vulcan roars out, No work, Rogues?

Phæb. 'Tis Vulcan, in a greater Heat
   Than th' Irons by his Cyclops beat:
He makes the horror of that noise,
   Teaching and Knocking his great Boys,
   (From hamm'ring out Jove's Thunder) let ACT V. THE REHEARSAL.

BAYES. I, Sir. But how would you fancie now to represent an Eclipse?

SML. Why, that's to be suppos'd.

BAYES. Suppos'd! Ay, you are ever at your suppose: ha, ha, ha. Why, you may as well suppose the whole Play. No it must come in upon the Stage, that's certain; but in some odd way, that may delight, amufe, and all that. I have a conceipt for't, that I am sure is new, and, I believe, to the purpose.

JOHNS. How's that?

BAYES. Why, the truth is, I took the first hint of this out of a Dialogue, between Phæbus and Aurora, in the Slighted Maid: which, by my troth, was very pretty; though, I think, you'll confes this is a little better.

JOHNS. No doubt on't, Mr. Bayes.

BAYES. But, Sir, you have heard, I suppose, that your Eclipse of the Moon, is nothing else, but an interposition of the Earth, between the Sun and Moon: as likewise your Eclipse of the Sun is caus'd by an interlocation of the Moon, betwixt the Earth and Sun?

SML. I have heard fo, indeed.

BAYES. Well, Sir; what do me I, but make the Earth, Sun, and Moon, come out upon the Stage, and dance the Hey: hum? And, of necessetty, by the very nature of this Dance, the Earth must be sometimes between the Sun and the Moon, and the Moon between the Earth and Sun; and there you have both your Eclipses. That is new, I gad, ha?

JOHNS. That must needs be very fine, truly.

BAYES. Yes, there is some fancie in't. And then, Sir, that there may be something in it of a Joque, I make the Moon fell the Earth a Bargain. Come, come out Eclipse, to the tune of Tom Tyler.

Enter Luna.

Luna. Orbis, O Orbis,
    Come to me thou little rogue Orbis.

Enter the Earth.

Orb. What calls Terra firma, pray?
ILLUSTRATIONS, &c.

To FILE and Polish Vulcan's Net,
Which he'll catch Mars and Venus in.
Aur. What now? [Laughing
Phæb. To laugh the Smiths begin:
At furious Vulcan (halting off
To measure his wife's Bed) they scoff.
Aur. I'll leave the place; I can no more Endure the Laughter than the Roar.
Tuning
Phæb. Hark, they record, they'll sing anon;
'Tis time for Phæbus to be gone;
For when such Lyric Asses bray,
The God of Mufique cannot flay.
[Exeunt Phæbus and Aurora.

The Cyclops Song (within).

Cry our Ware, (Sooty Fellows
Of the Forge and the Bellows)
Has Jove any Okes to rend?
Has Ceres Sickles to mend?
Wants Neptune a Water-Fork?
All these are the Cyclops work;
But to Wire-draw Iron-rods,
To File Nets to catch the Gods,
What can make our fingers so fine?
Drink, drink, Wine, Lippiari-wine.

Luna. Luna that ne'er shines by day.
Orb. What means Luna in a veil?
Luna. Luna means to shew her tail.

Enter Sol.
Sol. Fie, Sifter, fie; thou mak'st me mufe,
    Dery, dery down,
To see thee Orb abuse.
Luna. I hope his anger 'twill not move;
    Since I did it out of love.
    Hey down, dery down.
Orb. Where shall I thy true love know,
    Thou pretty, pretty Moon?
Luna. To morrow soon, ere it be noon,
    On Mount Vesuvio.

Sol. Then I will shine.
Orb. And I will be fine.
Luna. And we will drink nothing but Lipary wine.
Omnes. And we, &c.

Bayes. So, now, vanish Eclipse, and enter t'other Battel, and fight. Here now, if I am not mistaken, you will see fighting enough.

A battel is fought between foot and great Hobby-horses. At last, Drawcanfir comes in, and kills 'em all on both sides. All this while the Battel is fighting, Bayes is telling them when to shout, and shouts with 'em.

Draw. Others may boast a single man to kill;
    But I, the bloud of thoufands, daily spill.
Let petty Kings the names of Parties know:
Where e'er I come, I slay both friend and foe.
The swiftest Horfmen my swift rage controuls,
And from their Bodies drives their trembling fous.
If they had wings, and to the Gods could flie,
I would pursue, and beat 'em, through the skie:
And make proud Jove, with all his Thunder, fee.
This single Arm more dreadful is, than he. [Exit.

Bayes. There's a brave fellow for you now, Sirs. I have read of your Hector, your Achilles, and a hundred
'Valeria, Daughter to Maximin, having kill'd her self for the Love of Porphyrius, when she was to be carry'd off by the Bearers, strikes one of them a Box on the Ear, and speaks to him thus—

Hold! are you mad? you damn'd confounded Dog,
I am to rise, and speak the Epilogue.

Epilogue to the second edition of Tyrannick Love. 1672.

Kiv. 1704.
more; but I define all your Histories, and your Romances too, I gad, to shew me one such Conqueror, as this Draweansir.

JOHNS. I swear, I think you may.

Smi. But, Mr. Bayes, how shall all these dead men go off? for I see none alive to help 'em.

BAYES. Go off! why, as they came on; upon their legs: how should they go off? Why, do you think the people do not know they are not dead? He is mighty ignorant, poor man; your friend here is very silly, Mr. Johnson, I gad, he is. Come, Sir, I'll shew you go off. Rife, Sirs, and go about your business. There's go off for you. Hark you, Mr. Ivory. Gentlemen, I'll be with you presently. [Exit.

JOHNS. Will you so? then we'll be gone.

Smi. I, pr'ythee let's go, that we may preserve our hearing. One Battel more would take mine quite away. [Exeunt.

Enter BAYES and Players.

BAYES. Where are the Gentlemen?

1 Play. They are gone, Sir.

BAYES. Gone! 'Sdeath, this last Act is best of all. I'll go fetch 'em again. [Exit.

3 Play. Stay, here's a foul piece of papyrus of his. Let's see what 'tis.

[Reads. The Argument of the Fifth Act.

Cloris, at length, being sensible of Prince Prettyman's passion, consents to marry him; but, just as they are going to Church, Prince Prettyman meeting, by chance, with old Joan the Chandlers widow, and remembering it was she that brought him acquainted with Cloris: out of a high point of honour, break off his match with Cloris, and marries old Joan. Upon which, Cloris, in despair, drowns her self: and Prince Pretty-man, discontentedly, walks by the River side.

1 Play. Pox on't, this will never do; 'tis just like the rest. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt.
About the time of the Restoration and for some years after, the fashionable hour of dining was twelve o'clock, and the play began at three.

At the end of Sir W. D'Avenant's "The Cruelty of the Spaniards in Peru. Exprest by Instrumentall and Vocall Musick, and by Art of Perspective in Scenes, &c. Representer daily at the Cockpit in Drury-Lane, At Three afternoone punctually" London 1658: is the following notice:

"Notwithstanding the great expence necessary to Scenes, and other ornaments in this Entertainment, there is a good provision made of places for a shilling. And it shall begin certainly at 3 after noon."

The Rehearsal is therefore supposed to take place in the morning.
Enter Bayes

Bayes. A plague on 'em both for me, they have made me sweat, to run after 'em. A couple of fence-less rascals, that had rather go to dinner, than see this Play out, with a pox to 'em. What comfort has a man to write for such dull rogues? Come Mr.---a---Where are you, Sir? come away quick, quick.

Enter Players again.

Play. Sir, they are gone to dinner.
Bayes. Yes, I know the Gentlemen are gone; but I ask for the Players.
Play. Why, an't please your worship, Sir, the Players are gone to dinner too.
Bayes. How! are the Players gone to Dinner? 'Tis impossible: the Players gone to dinner! I gad, if they are, I'll make 'em know what it is to injure a person that does 'em the honour to write for 'em, and all that. A company of proud, conceited, humorous, cross-grained persons, and all that. I gad, I'll make 'em the most contemptible, despicable, inconsiderable persons, and all that, in the whole world, for this trick. I gad, I'll be reveng'd on 'em; I'll fell this Play to the other House.
Play. Nay, good, Sir, don't take away the Book; you'll disappoint the Town, that comes to see it acted here, this afternoon.
Bayes. That's all one. I must reserve this comfort to my self, my Book and I will go together, we will not part, indeed, Sir. The Town! why, what care I for the Town? I gad, the Town has us'd me as scurvily, as the Players have done: but I'll be reveng'd on them too: I will both Lampoon and print 'em too, I gad. Since they will not admit of my Plays, they shall know what a Satyrift I am. And so farewel to this Stage for ever, I gad.

Exit.

Play. What shall we do now?
ILLUSTRATIONS, &c.
2 Play. Come then, let's set up Bills for another Play: We shall lose nothing by this, I warrant you.

1 Play. I am of your opinion. But, before we go, let's see Haynes, and Shirley practice the last Dance; for that may serve for another Play.

2 Play. I'll call 'em: I think they are in the Tyring-

The Dance done.

1 Play. Come, come; let's go away to dinner.

[Exeunt omnes.]
EPILOGUE.

The Play is at an end, but where's the Plot?
That circumstance our Poet Bayes forgot,
And we can boast, though 'tis a plotting Age,
No place is freer from it than the Stage.
The Ancients Plotted, though, and strove to please
With fence that might be understood with ease;
They every Scene with so much wit did store
That who brought any in, went out with more:
But this new way of wit does so surprise,
Men lose their wits in wond'ring where it lies.
If it be true, that Monstrous births prefage
The following mischiefs that afflicts the Age,
And sad disasters to the State proclaim;
Plays, without head or tail, may do the fame.
Wherefore, for ours, and for the Kingdoms peace,
May this prodigious way of writing cease.
Let's have, at least, once in our lives, a time
When we may hear some Reason, not all Rhyme:
We have these ten years felt its Influence;
Pray let this prove a year of Prose and Sense.

FINIS.